

As any #resistance fighter is surely aware, Facebook recently widened its ban on political advertisements on its platform. As of yesterday, all political and issue-based advertising has been disallowed. While we normally approve of any efforts Silicon Valley makes to put an end to disinformation, the furthering of a fascist regime, or blatant lying, this has had the negative repercussion of damaging businesses like ours; companies like BYOB Designs that seek only to highlight the more spirited moments of political discourse.

To that end, we've worked to put together a line of made-in-the-U.S.A. products that bear the brand of democracy in action, not inaction. Our collection of Ruth Bader Ginsburg designs, T-Shirts, and glasses are sure to inspire even the most disillusioned leftist. Her legacy, silhouette, and words are plastered on only the sturdiest material, befitting of one of our most stalwart justices for equality.

Moreover, we've sought to encapsulate the most memorable moments from the debates, speeches, and gaffes that comprised one of the most hard-fought, downright crazy election cycles in American history. Who can forget the fly on Mike Pence's head, surely attracted to the specific smell of fallacies he was rattling off? Or the too-many-to-count times our candidates have taken the high road, from "I'm talking" to the slightly more incensed "Shut up, man."

We may not yet know the results of the election for an untold amount of time, but the ride getting there was eventful, treacherous, and not without the odd laugh – even if it was to stave off the despair. With BYOB Designs, we still see a path to a brighter future, and we'll continue to help pave the road with our best democratic zingers, our most powerful rhetoric, and our most treasured memories.
