

A Brief Guide on Moving To LA

Los Angeles is a great location to consider moving to, as it's the second-largest city in the United States. Los Angeles is also known for its entertainment industry and sunny weather, making it a great place to live year-round.

Los Angeles has numerous neighborhoods and communities you may want to consider living in, depending on your needs and preferences. Some of these areas include Silverlake, Santa Monica, Beverly Hills, West Hollywood, and Pasadena.

However, before making a move, it's important to research everything that will come with this change - from what neighborhoods you're looking at to schools your children would go to if they were enrolled in public school there.

Facts About Los Angeles

There is a lot to know about Los Angeles and the surrounding cities. Here are just a few to know:

- The number of people who live in Los Angeles: Approximately 3+ million.
- The average temperature during the year: 67 degrees Fahrenheit.
- Most extensive community College/University system: California State University - LA, Long Beach, and Fullerton (and more).
- The number of major highways running through the city: Over 40.
- The number of beaches in the area: Over 20.
- Most popular tourist attractions: Universal Studios, Disneyland Resort, and Hollywood Walk of Fame.
- The average cost of a home in Los Angeles: $612,000+ (and more).
- The number of people who work for the entertainment industry in LA County alone: Over 490,000+.
- The number of people who work in the arts, entertainment, and recreation industry: Over 200,000.
- The number of films that were shot in Los Angeles last year: More than 250.

Los Angeles is a great place to live due to its numerous job opportunities and proximity to family and friends across the country if you want to visit.

Why Move to LA

Los Angeles is one of the most popular places to move to because it offers so much. The weather in Los Angeles allows residents to enjoy outdoor activities year-round. Outdoor living spaces are very common for homes and apartments in LA, with many having patios or balconies that provide a great place to entertain guests. There is also an abundance of hiking trails, with some of the best ones in LA located within easy driving distance.

Other reasons to move to Los Angeles include growing job opportunities and a strong economy, which has kept unemployment low for years. In addition, the entertainment industry is also headquartered in Los Angeles, so there are more than enough jobs that cater to this specific field if you're looking to pursue a career in the entertainment industry.

The cost of living is also lower than many other major cities around the country, making it an attractive location for those looking to live independently or with roommates. There are also plenty of different apartments and rentals available throughout Los Angeles, so you can find one that meets your needs, whether you need to be close to work or prefer a quiet place with your own space.

With the right information, moving to Los Angeles can be a rewarding experience. However, if you're considering making a move, there are many things that you should consider to have an easy transition.

What to Know Before Moving to LA

The first thing that you should do is to research the area you are moving into. The internet provides a wealth of information on neighborhoods, schools, and crime rates for any area in Los Angeles.

You'll also want to look at living arrangements as well before making your move. Everything from renting or buying property will need to be considered. You'll also want to research the local school system and what zoning areas your child will be able to attend for you both to have an easier time adjusting once they start classes.

You'll also want to consider how you plan on getting around the city. Some areas of Los Angeles are a bit more spread out than others, so it's essential to know your driving and public transportation options before making any decisions.

The next thing that you should do is look at employment opportunities in the area and housing costs. You'll want to consider all your options when it comes to employment, including both full-time and part-time work.

You should also determine whether the family will need the extra room for everyone to be comfortable or if you plan on living with roommates while adjusting to LA life. This step is especially important if you are planning on renting.

It's also essential to find out what the culture is like in Los Angeles. Many different cultures make up this city, so it's vital to know where you fit in best with your neighbors or colleagues at work.

Once all of these things are taken care of, you can make a move with peace of mind that everything has been properly planned out.

Born To Move Moving Services

There's a lot you should consider before deciding to relocate to Los Angeles. However, don't worry! Born to Move provides flat-rate moving services that include packing supplies, gas, taxes, tolls, labor, and fuel protection. Born to Move is also insured up to $1 million in the event of an accident during the transfer. We even provide containers for your clothing, dishes, and other household items.

GPS tracking is also available so you can follow the truck as it transports your belongings. You may rest assured that your goods will arrive in Los Angeles on time because of GPS tracking. Fast, inexpensive white-glove service is what we're known for at Born to Move (and we're pretty proud of it). We'll pick up your products and get them moving right now to the destination where they'll be delivered.

We mandate that the interstate movers abide by FMCSA regulations. Therefore, our company will provide you with a specific vehicle and team dedicated only to your move and belongings. We won't switch vehicles or drivers at any stop along the route, meaning the pick-up location's movers will also be at the drop-off site to unload.

Contact us today through our website, or give us a call at (617) 903-2609 for a quick quote to get started.