SANTA FE, NM – While the world rushes to meet the future, three painters in Russia continue to paint with conviction and confidence in one of the best-loved styles of the past. That style is Impressionism and the painters are 61-year-old master Nikolai Morgoon and two young prodigies: Alexey Kamenev, age 29, and 22-year-old Ilya Motov, known as Ilya.

Having recently received a shipment of sumptuous new paintings by these exquisitely talented artists, Giacobbe-Fritz Fine Art is proud to present the exhibition “Impressions of Russia,” opening Friday, September 30, 2005, with a reception from 5 pm – 7 pm. This event is open to the public. The exhibition runs through October 12.

With the recent discovery by American art lovers of contemporary Russian artists, these painters’ works are more collectible than ever. They are also extraordinarily beautiful: scenes of village life and sailing skiffs, villa interiors and snowbound farms, ballet studios and floral still-lives, painted in vivid color with bravura brushstrokes. Morgoon, the maestro, paints elegant interiors with refined grace. Young talents Kamenev and Ilya revel in the bold application of paint and share a special sympathy for village and country life.

All paintings are handsomely framed and range in price from $2,200 to $9,000. For more information, please telephone or e-mail Giacobbe-Fritz Fine Art.
