MEN'S WOMEN'S NEW

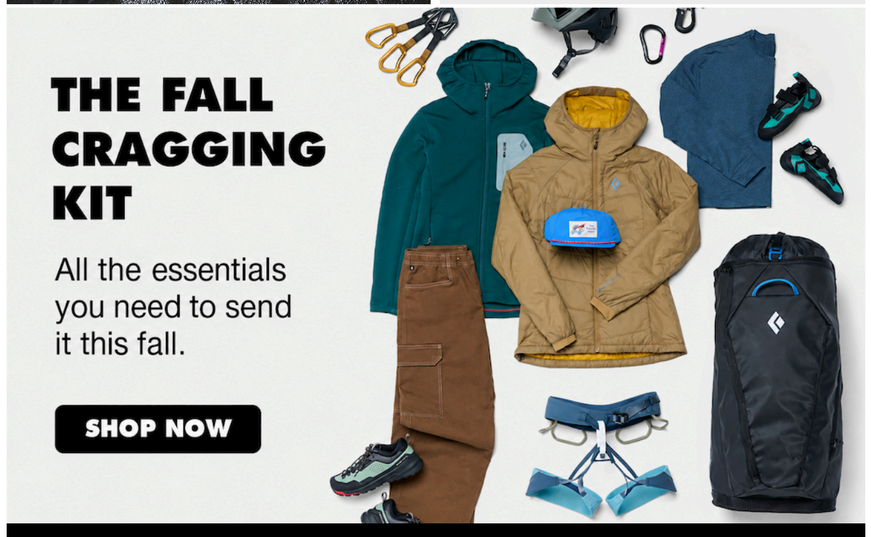

They started the clean climbing revolution, but who even climbs with Stoppers anymore? Have they become a relic of the past, like hexes and tricams? In our latest installment of Gear Myths, we dig deep into these questions with Black Diamond Athletes, aka the world's best trad climbers.

IMPACT 2025 REPORT

At Black Diamond, we've always had a broader mandate than just building innovative climbing protection; from the beginning, our goal has been to protect what matters. To this, we have three guiding tenets—sustainability, advocacy, and inclusion—that are the pillars of our annual Impact Report. Each pillar influences our business and the sports we serve. Here are some highlights from 2025.

SUSTAINABILITY

We continued to reduce our carbon footprint to reach our 2030 sustainability goals.

2030 Goals

50%
Reduction in carbon intensity

50%
Reduction in waste

30%
Reduction in ton mileage (relative to revenue) of Distribution and Supply Chain

We introduced new materials partners, like CiCLO®, to reduce our environmental impact.

Our ReRoute repair team expanded, building a solid foundation for product repair and recyclability. The team worked to open a ReRoute Repair Center at our HQ location in SLC, UT. Over the course of the year, the ReRoute team performed over 1000 apparel and pack repairs, and over 15,000 cam reslings and repairs.

ADVOCACY

In 2025, we saw attacks to public lands from the national government in unprecedented ways. This led to our "Not One Acre" Campaign, focused on activating the climbing community and asking them to help us in protecting public lands from private sell-off.

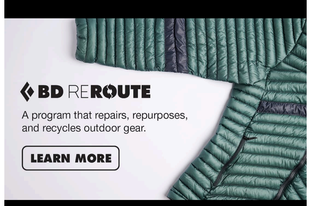

INCLUSION

In 2025, we joined NOLS in launching a scholarship to invest in the outdoor community. Together, we believe that the wilderness is the best teacher and that the lessons learned and skills sharpened in wild places help elevate the leader in everyone.

We continued to support BIPOC AMGA programs, sponsoring 6 individuals with course tuition, free Black Diamond gear, and a travel stipend.
