

whatever happened to: DAVE COULIER?

Widely rumoured to be the rat bastard “you” addressed in Alanis Morissette’s ranty chart-topper “You Oughta Know,” Dave (“Cool-yay”) Coulier got his start in stand-up and went on to loan his pipes to a long line of animated hits, including The Jetsons and Muppet Babies. Fame came calling in 1987 when he was cast as Full House goofball Joey Gladstone, beloved for the catchphrase “Cut it out” and its rad scissory hand signal.

As if he wasn’t busy enough, during the run of the show Coulier also married, divorced, became father to a son, and hosted home-video programme America’s Funniest People. When Full House ended in 1995, he maintained his profile with acting and voice roles, as well as appearances on reality shows, notably Skating with Celebrities on which he was paired with Olympian Nancy Kerrigan. He also released several CDs, including a kids’ compilation entitled Songs in the Key of Beaver.

In 2008, Coulier became commissioner of wrestling organisation Chikara, and fought in a tag-team match alongside the world’s smallest man, the late He Pingping. Today he resides in LA, tours with family-friendly act The Clean Guys of Comedy, and supplements his income by hocking “Cut it out”-related merchandise online. PHILIPPA PRENTICE

lookalikes

Nurse Jackie’s Edie Falco and talk-show host Ellen DeGeneres Sent in by reader Hayden Smith

going up going down

up

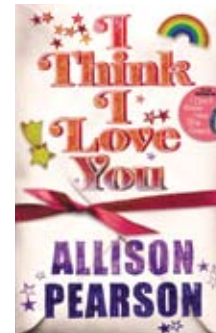

TV3’s Rachel Smalley

She’s classy and non-simpering. She can stay.

Cyclops lemon and honey yoghurt

Real lemon, real honey, really good yoghurt.

I Think I Love You
by Allison Pearson
Chick lit with smarts – and soul.

Argan oil

Cheap, natural, and it does great things for hair and skin.

down

The demise of the traditional keffiyeh

Popularised by fashion victims and manufactured cheaply in China, the only remaining factory in Palestine is now on its last loom.

TV reporters filming themselves making phone calls

Spare us the performance.

Sleep envy

Resentfully tossing and turning while your partner snores. It’s no picnic.

list of 4

Things suggested by modern music that are difficult to replicate:

- 1 Dancing on the ceiling.
- 2 Building a city on rock and roll.
- 3 Rocking and rolling all night, then continuing to party every day.
- 4 Raising your hands in the air, then waving them in a way that suggests indifference.

