

AZZ Workplace Update

Please read below for an important announcement

New displays will be installed at your local plant

AZZ understands that employee engagement is about carving out a deeper commitment with our employees by staying connected through consistent and direct communication.

In an effort to increase employee engagement and to develop a more integrated workplace, AZZ will be launching a new platform of visual communication to give its employees a clearer understanding of how the company is fulfilling its mission, purpose and objectives.

Starting soon, each plant will receive an LED display screen (known as the Communication Station) that will be mounted and installed in a common work area, such as a breakroom, for employees to view and monitor throughout the work day. Company-wide news, safety and health messages, key policies and other important changes throughout the organization will be communicated in real time — ensuring your team stays up to date on all things AZZ!

Another exciting feature of the platform is the ability to create and publish custom messaging at each AZZ location. You'll have the ability to upload local and plant-related news to share with your employees and a simple interface and “step-by-step” training will be provided as part of the implementation.

Our corporate IT department will be contacting you shortly to coordinate an installation date at your plant. Installation will be minimally impactful on business operations and will be handled by our technology partner, Mainstreet, Inc.

For ongoing questions, please contact Casey Rayman at caseyrayman@azz.com.

AZZ is excited to keep your plant involved with our ongoing mission.
