WORDLE

If you have not heard yet, Wordle is taking over group chats and Twitter feeds everywhere. The daily game's goal is guessing the five-letter word in six tries, with each guess' letters highlighting green, yellow, or gray, depending on if the letter is in the right spot, in the word, or not in the word at all. The game is simple, fun to talk about with friends and family, and easy to share on social media by simply tweeting green, yellow, and gray squares according to how one played that day — good clean fun with a no spoilers bonus. For word and game lovers alike, taking a break once per day to try one's luck at the popular game is a welcome treat. To try for yourself, just search Wordle and click on The New York Times' link, which should be the first to come up.
