Join our charity golf tournament for COVID-19!

The Buffalo Bills are teaming up with our sponsors for a charity golf event. We need players and coaches to dust off those golf bags and work on their swing. We are doing this to raise money for those affected by COVID-19. Official bragging rights are on the line, so bring your game players. There is a chance for your name to be on the first-ever One Buffalo charity golf trophy.

The reason behind this tournament

- Donations raised will go to organizations working across multiple areas of the Buffalo region.
- These donations will help supply health workers with masks and other medical supplies.
- Local businesses will be receiving stuff like hand sanitizer, masks and donations to keep them running.
- Supporting our local homeless shelters with essential supplies and food.

As a part of the Buffalo Bills organization, we need to give back and support our community. Many individuals look up to our players. We want to show them we do more than play football. Spend a day playing golf and donating to help rebuild our community.

Affected by the COVID-19 pandemic

Business owners have stated that watching the Bills this season has been their bright spot in the dark world we live in now.

“Watching the Bills every Sunday is something that I can look forward to,” said Franco Kroese, a local pizza owner. “In these tough times, the community looks up to the Bills for joy in their lives.”

Who’s already signed up

Terry and Kim Pegula will be out and playing in the tournament. Also, Brandon Beane and Sean McDermott will be out there trying to set the course record.

Quotes from our leaders

“Golf has to be one of my favourite sports, and I can’t wait to see all the guys out there on the course instead of the field,” said Terry Pegula. “I know every one of these guys is competitive, so this should be a great tournament, and I love that we are doing this while raising money for charity.”

“I couldn’t be more excited,” said Beane. “Golf is a whole lot different than football. I am an avid golfer and look forward to playing in this tournament and giving back to the community.”
