

What Naga finds offputting

NAGA Munchetty might look unflappable when she presents BBC Breakfast but it's a different story when she's on the golf course. The 49-year-old, left, who plays off a handicap of six, says her pet hate is other players offering unsolicited advice about her swing or trying to strike up a conversation while she's lining up a putt. 'One of my favourite lines is, "Is my golf interrupting your conversation?" I'm a stickler for certain things,' she says.

AFTER a 2018 film about his band Bros made Matt Goss a laughing stock, the singer is hoping a second might set the record straight. Matt tells me he is in talks to make a documentary with Louis Theroux following him as he records a new album.

THE HOTTEST GOSSIP

Did Charles's ex-aide help smooth way for Meghan's new PR man?

FOUR years after turning their back on Britain, have Prince Harry and Meghan taken the first tentative steps to finding a bridge between them and the Royal Family?

I can reveal the couple's new PR man in the UK and Europe is linked to one of the King's most trusted former advisers – and insiders predict the connection may help the Sussexes rebuild their tattered relationship with the Palace.

Charlie Gipson was last week appointed as UK director of communications for their charitable foundation Archewell. The move came four years after they swore never to engage with the British press again.

He is a protégé of Julian Payne, who was head of communications for Charles when he was Prince of Wales, and who maintains close ties with the King. Only last month Julian was at an event at Highgrove for the charity founded by Charles in his role as a trustee for the King's Foundation.

Julian stepped back from Clarence House in January 2021, having worked there during the tumultuous Megxit period, and is now boss of crisis management firm Edelman. Charlie, 41, was employed by Edelman until joining Archewell, and Julian is said to rate him highly. There is even some suggestion that Julian played a part in helping secure the appointment, but last night he played that down, telling me: 'I'll talk to anybody if they want some input and advice on what life in the Royal Household is like and what a fantastic privilege it is, but he hasn't asked me, and I wouldn't interpose myself.'

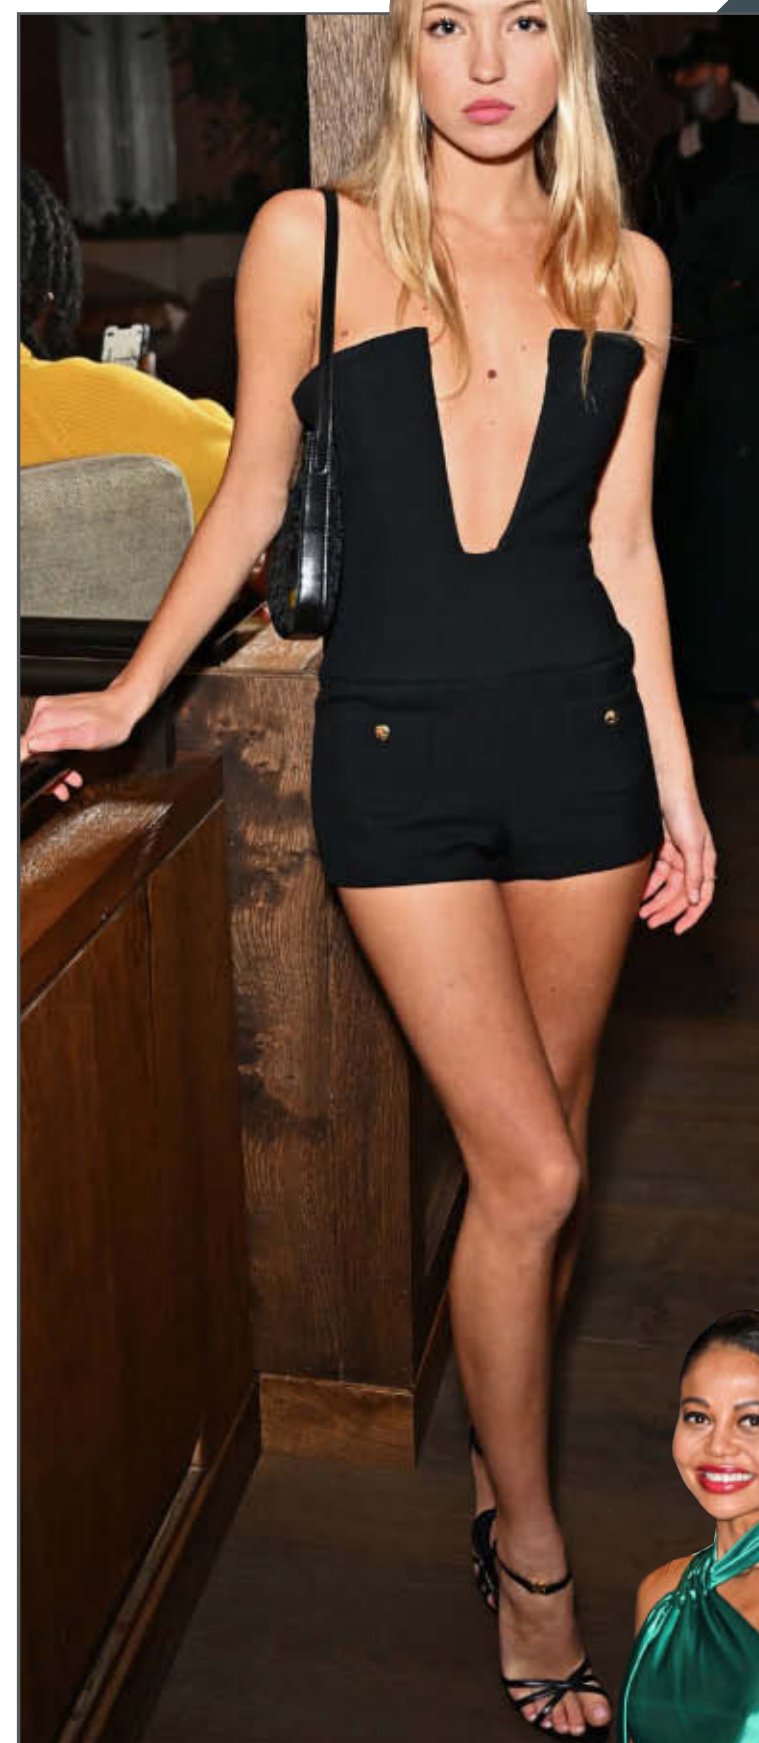

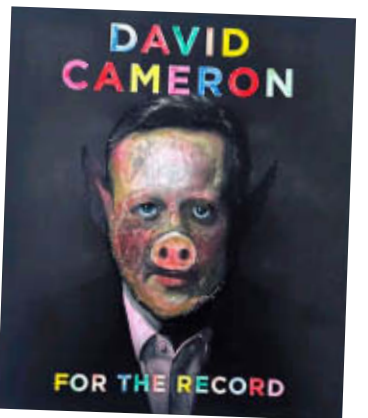

A source who knows Charlie adds: 'Julian can be really useful for Charlie, who doesn't have many connections yet from that world. Perhaps between them, Julian and Charlie can smooth everything over because of these mutual connections. Charlie is talented – but he is several rungs down the ladder.'

'I think there's such an obvious royal link with Julian to make use of.'

In his new post, Charlie will report to Meghan and Harry's new US spokesman Kyle Boulija.

The fine art of graphic insults

ARTIST Jake Chapman's contempt for David Cameron shows no sign of abating. Chapman, who says he once considered fighting the former PM when he turned up unexpectedly to his art exhibition, has now produced a range of graphic portraits of the Foreign Secretary including this one, right. Not hiding his feelings, Chapman has called the collection of £250 prints Moron...

So this is where Lila stands on her shoes...

MODEL Lila Moss can't wait for the summer to arrive so that she can flaunt her cleavage – but it's not quite what you think.

For Kate Moss's daughter, left, has a penchant for displaying her 'toe cleavage' – the very tops of her tootsies – and the warmer weather will allow her to wear shoes cut low enough. 'I'm excited to get my ballet flats back out because I haven't been wearing them with socks,' the 21-year-old told Interview magazine.

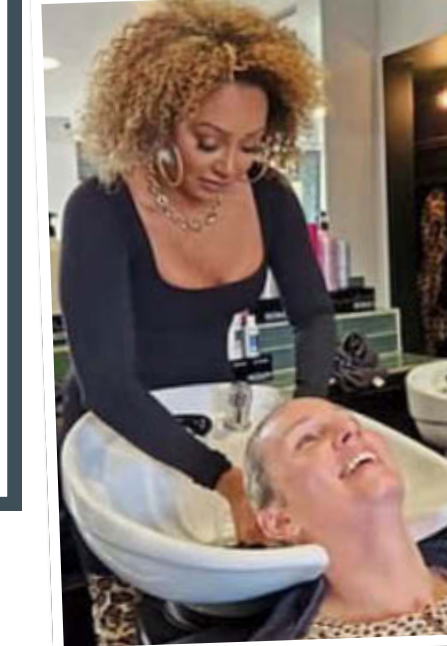

'This is my other particular thing: I like it when you can see a bit of toe cleavage.'

Shoe designers agree. Christian Louboutin has called toe cleavage 'provocative' while Manolo Blahnik has said it was 'a very important part of the sexuality of the shoe', decreeing: 'You must only show the first two cracks.'

Should you want to follow her style, Lila recommends ballet flats from Miu Miu and Repetto as giving the perfect amount of exposure. She has been prone to showing off the other end of her toes, too, once sharing a photo of her long pointed red toenails which led fans to wonder how on earth she got her socks on.

Parties are just the job for Emma

AS THE Marchioness of Bath, Emma Thynn is already a fixture at the most glamorous society parties. And she's taking no chances on those invitations drying up, as she has just been made social editor-at-large at Hello! magazine, which will involve reporting from 'high-profile events, exhibitions, fashion shows and film festivals'.

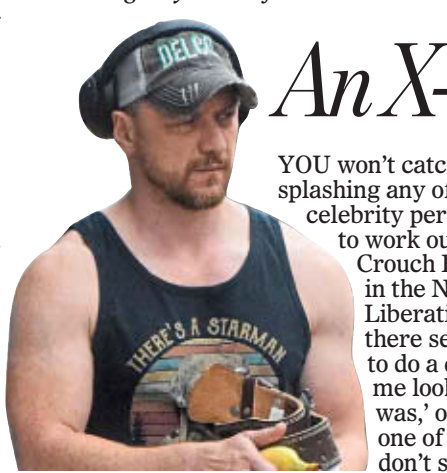

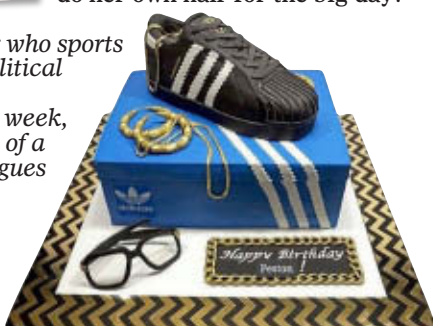

A Scary day at the salon

SHOULD the long-threatened Spice Girls reunion ever materialise, Mel B might be able to turn her hand to hairdressing.

The 48-year-old has been working at her fiancé Rory McPhee's salon in Leeds, left, washing hair and serving tea to customers who had won a competition for the privilege. Yet Scary Spice lived up to her nickname, as she wasn't always gentle with the clients, and admits she kept having to let Rory take over.

The couple are hoping to marry at St Paul's Cathedral. As the holder of an MBE, the Spice Girl is entitled to tie the knot there – though there is a long waiting list. Perhaps she can do her own hair for the big day!

♦ IT'S not just the Prime Minister who sports Adidas Samba trainers – ITV's political editor Robert Peston is a fan too. Celebrating his 64th birthday last week, the broadcaster shared this photo of a personalised cake from his colleagues on The Rest Is Money podcast, complete with trademark glasses and trainers made from icing. He said that 'for the avoidance of doubt', he was wearing the designs 'years before Sunak'.

An X-Man X-ercises

YOU won't catch X-Men star James McAvoy, left, splashing any of his estimated £16million fortune on celebrity personal trainers – he's more than content to work out at a no-frills £26-a-month Pure Gym in Crouch End. Glasgow-born James, 45, who lives in the North London district with wife Lisa Liberati and their young son, has been spotted there several times, causing fellow gym-goers to do a double-take. 'I thought the guy behind me looked familiar and then I twigged who it was,' one said. 'I was quite shocked really – it's one of the cheapest gyms around, and you don't see many other famous faces here.'

'JOHNNY MATHIS IS THE BEST BALLAD SINGER IN THE WORLD' JOHNNY CARSON

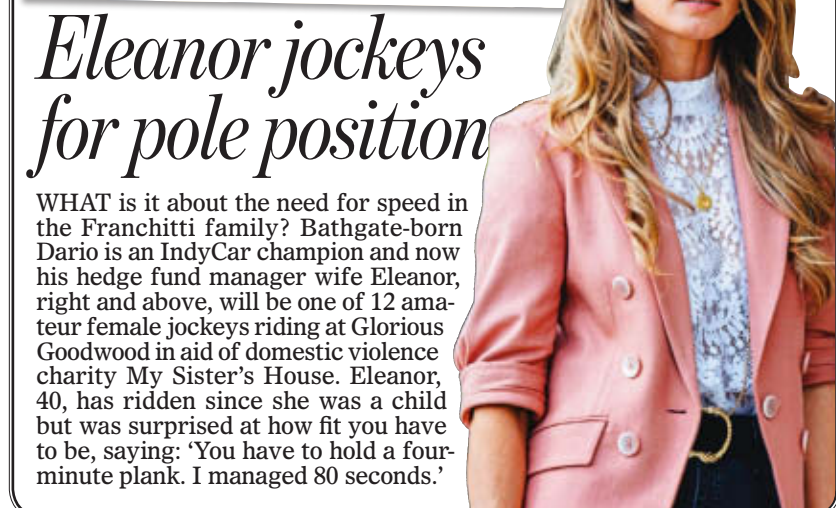

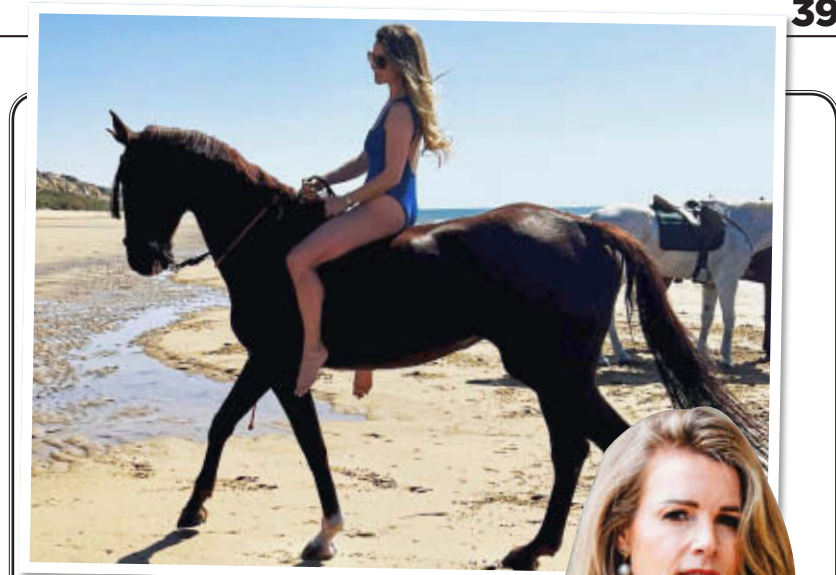

We don't think there are many who would argue with that comment! The fact that you can hear every word he sings is thanks to his voice teacher Connie Cox, who accepted Johnny as a 13-year-old. She taught him classical and operatic music, scales and vocal exercises, all of which helped develop his diction and that silky-smooth voice. It's also no surprise that he cited Nat King Cole, Lena Horne, and Bing Crosby among his musical heroes and greatest influences. This great-value, 54-track, three-CD collection contains some of the finest music Johnny ever recorded including hits such as The Twelfth of Never, Misty, A Certain Smile, Stone In Love With You, Chances Are and his hit with Deniece Williams, Too Much, Too Little, Too Late.

Eleanor jockeys for pole position

WHAT is it about the need for speed in the Franchitti family? Bathgate-born Dario is an IndyCar champion and now his hedge fund manager wife Eleanor, right and above, will be one of 12 amateur female jockeys riding at Glorious Goodwood in aid of domestic violence charity My Sister's House. Eleanor, 40, has ridden since she was a child but was surprised at how fit you have to be, saying: 'You have to hold a four-minute plank. I managed 80 seconds.'
