What's In The Box?

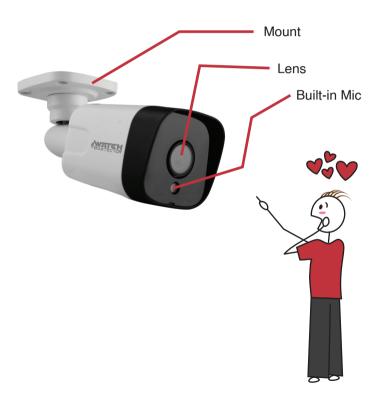

Our amazing cloud service. It won't be in the box, but you get the idea, right?

Behold! This right here is what a masterpiece looks like.

Camera Introduction

Step 1: Stare at the camera and wish really hard for it to set itself up. If that doesn't work, proceed to step 2.

Step 2: Gather your tools, including a vernier caliper, an adjustable quantum spanner (if you can locate one in a parallel universe), and a flux capacitor for time-traveling installation. And oh, if all else fails, keep a hammer made from the heart of a dying unicorn handy, just in case the other tools fail to impress.

Step 3: Cry a river, until Justin Timberlake magically appears from your basement and graciously sets it up for you

Disclaimer: We don't REALLY expect anyone named Justin to come out of your basement unless you happen to live with someone named Justin. In that case, just call him already. You need his HELP. And, we definitely do not mean Mr. Timberlake to give you a hand in this installation, unless, by chance, you live in his house. In such an event, please give us a call. Please? We pledge not only to set up the camera for you but also to assist with your laundry. Special focus on PLEDGE.

Mounting Instructions

- Mounting the camera is a no-brainer, just keep it away from direct light sources, and you're good to go!
- Waterproof? Yes. Aquaman-level? No. Rain and snow are a no-go zone for the camera's lens.
- Keep that lens sparkling! Give it some love with a gentle wipe down using a soft cloth for top-notch image quality.
- Shelter the power ports. They're allergic to water and dirt; don't let them hang out with those elements.
- If the polar bears are chill with -35°C, so is the camera. But just like warming up before a work out, power it on indoors for a few minutes before kicking it outside.
