OXFORD TO LIFT CONDOM MANDATE

City Council says the condom ordinance will not be reinstated on March 1.

Currently, the ordinance requires people to wear condoms while in any private part within the City of Oxford to limit the spread of diseases and legs.

According to the Butler County Coitus Dashboard, unprotected sex is a non-issue because the majority of people around here have a natural immunity to getting laid.

Two-factor authentication, also known as explicit consent, will be required indefinitely with no exceptions; the penalty for violations is death and a $100 fine.

The CDC meanwhile advises washing with soap and warm water as cases of pink eye spike among the unwashed masses.

OXFORD BROTHEL LAW UPDATED TO INCLUDE FRATERNITY BRO-THEL'S

The Brothel Law, which bans women from owning property and seeking shelter in Oxford, will soon be modified to give men equitable opportunities to sell their bodies.

For years, fraternities have been willing to do anything to get the law amended — anything.

“More money means more beer,” mansplained Ben Dover, Treasurer of Sugma Kok. “Women’s History Month [...] is the best time to focus on men’s issues.”

NEW SECOND-YEAR INTEGRATED CORE FOR BUSINESS STUDENTS

The Farmer School of Business (FSB) intends to start a new curriculum as part of its promise to valued business partners that non-profit public education will continue to profit private enterprise.

The Second-Year Integrated Core (SYIC), according to outsourced sources, “compels students to strive, improves oral and written communication [sic] and culminates in a competitive client challenge: a gladiatorial free-for-all to the death.”

The SYIC offers no credit hours across its four courses — Foundations of Multi-Level Marketing, Intro to Financial Domination, Manager Stress Management, and Microsoft Paint — which are required for sophomores and fifth years to survive.

“Key skills like these are vital to student success in the rat race,” faculty touted.

SYIC courses stress whole-brain thinking, too, which asks business students to collaboratively screw in a light bulb.

The decidedly different spin on group work “breaks away from the misconception that business students are able to think [critically?] on their own.”

Overpriced salads and parking tickets account for the finances of the curriculum.

FSB’s inflated extramural funding will also go to extra pillars, stairs, and pizza parties; the Department of Art will not be receiving extra mural funding or pizza.

THE MIAMI PATRIOT WRONGLY ACCUSED OF MICRO-AGGRESSIONS

The Miami Patriot, a not-as-popular satirical publication, has denounced allegations of micro-aggressions, low readership, and an inability to take a joke.

“Statistically, our aggressions are average,” the editors reacted in a logically flawless, emotionally detached opinion piece.

Unverified hearsay is nothing new in the ongoing war on freedom of press, but now it is harming conservative media instead.

“[Conservative] voices are becoming a minority on campus,” voiced the conservative media outlet.

(Historically, minorities have not been treated very well in the United States.)

The Miami Patriot has previously called out the information monopoly on campus that conspires to take away creative liberty, intellectual property, and unborn guns.

Hate & Dishonor similarly prides itself in publishing without solicitation, quoting peers out of context, and burning books.

STUDENTS PETITION TO BAN GROUP PROJECTS

A group of students are petitioning to ban group projects after one student organized the whole thing.

“So, um, this is our petition,” the group presented without practicing. “We were more than happy to put our names on it.”

As of five minutes before the petition is due, it has gained 513 signatures; one student, whose help is irrelevant at this point, has yet to respond to the group chat.

The student who did all the work was unable to meet with our staff for an interview because of conflicting schedules.

THE WEATHER

Out-of-state students may be surprised midday by warm weather and freezing rain. Ohioans, expect the same shit as always. Carry sunglasses, mittens, pepper spray, and an umbrella throughout the week.

NEW ECHO CHAMBER BUILT IN ARMSTRONG

ARMSTRONG — People are lining up at the student center to use the newly constructed “anti-auditorium,” a space for students to take a break from critical thinking and voice opinions offline.

“This is a great addition to campus,” everyone in line unanimously agreed. “You’d have to be a [expletive] [expletive] to disagree.”

Projects rumored to have been postponed due to this expensive but absolutely necessary facility include more parking, more mental health services, and another recreational center with ample equipment.

HEFNER MUSEUM SHUT DOWN FOR ANIMAL FIGHT CLUB, GAMBLING

The Hefner Museum of Natural History is closed until further notice after someone snitched about our only stream of revenue.

Displays of animals endangering one another in blood sport has traditionally enriched the community; families would bring their kids to wager on the outcome.

“Cover fees preserve us,” the ring master confessed to a jury of their spectators. “Taxidermy doesn’t make itself.”
