MIAMI UNIVERSITY HONORS ITS PURITAN TRADITIONS WITH NEW CODE OF CONDUCT

Students pumped to shotgun beers this week may find themselves pumped by shotguns thanks to Miami University's reformed Code of Student Conduct, which aims to eliminate ceremonies and practices not rooted in the M Book.

According to the code, intoxication and other sacrilege will no longer be tolerated "in classrooms during instruction, laboratory or other research settings, and in healthcare settings."

The Miami University Beveled-M is to be worn on a lanyard by heretics at all times; bearers of the scarlet letter can expect to be publicly stoned and given no munchies.

Starting today, local law enforcement will increase witch-hunts and repress hedons who are publicly impious.

"Someone, somewhere, is having a good time," an officer preached in town square. "The depravity of college drinking culture must be severely punished."

Violators, especially underaged sinners, will receive discipline in the form of a restorative community experience (building a chapel on campus), a minimum banishment of one semester, or a tithing of up to $150.

Hate & Dishonor is expected to be burned at the stake for general irreverence and blasphemy sometime next week.

MEGA BEER TOWER TO FINISH CONSTRUCTION BY EARLY APRIL

UPTOWN — Construction of a mega beer tower on the corner of High Street and College Avenue is scheduled to finish by April 1.

The mega beer tower, which will drill a well and use high-pressure fluid to extract Natural Light, will be able to brew around 20 kegs of crude beer a day.

Unfermented beer, which reached a record $5 a pint over the weekend, could exceed $6 before the end of the semester.

As beer prices continue to rise across the township because of university sanctions, off-campus fracking presents an in-your-backyard solution to the ongoing alcohol supply crisis in Oxford.

"Students have to fill up on beer each day to get to class," an upperclassman explained. "Low-income consumers of beer, especially fraternity households, are hurt the most by higher beer prices."

However, some killjoys oppose the project.

The Green Beer Initiative, an abstinence activism group, advocates to halt construction of the mega beer tower.

"Think about the learning environment," the organization protested earlier this week. "GPA matters more than GBD."

The City of Oxford refused to comment on the protest and further denies that runoff presents a hazard to the local water supply, stating "it can't possibly get any worse."

"Hold my beer."

ADVICE FOR SAFE DRINKING, PARTYING, AND OTHER HIJINKS

The Editorial Staff at Hate & Dishonor has compiled some tips and tricks to help you stay safe and sane over the alcohol holidays.

1. Drinking is better with friends; if you don't have any friends, you can buy some at your local fraternity or sorority.
2. Know your rights: if you are suspected of public intoxication, law enforcement is not allowed to call your mother while on duty.
3. If you or a loved one have been diagnosed with underaged drinking, you may be entitled to social compensation.
4. Exploit the buddy system to stay close to someone way out of your league.
5. Don't accept drinks or advice from strangers, especially the Editorial Staff at Hate & Dishonor.

THE COOLER

Daylight saving time indicates less time to drink. Expect scattered darts in the early morning to continue until dusk as peer pressure rises. Radar forecasts moderate drinking to continue over spring break.

HOW TO IDENTIFY SLEEPER AGENTS HIDING AMONG US

Russia is rumored to have sent sleeper agents to enforce the drinking age and other liquor laws in local bars.

Keep an eye out for undercover agents: white men with beer bellies, receding hairlines, and unflattering sunglasses.

Report suspicious activity to no one.

FRATERNITY BROTHER CROSSES THE ROAD

HIGH STREET — Locals are left wondering why a drunk fraternity brother would cross the road without looking both ways, which resulted in a multi-vehicle pileup and numerous injuries.

The answer: to get to the other side, according to Oxford PD.

“The beer is always greener on the other side,” the brother slurred between slurs to police and bystanders. “[EXPLETIVE].”

A Good Samaritan thankfully stepped in and recorded the crash at a safe distance.
