Former Eagles Guitarist Don Felder Rocks The Sharon

By KRISTEN FIORE | Daily Sun Senior Writer

Don Felder's fingers flew across his guitar as he leaned into the music Thursday night at The Sharon L. Morse Performing Arts Center. Felder, a former member of the Eagles and co-writer of "Hotel California" performed at the venue with his band.

They opened the show with "Already Gone" and went on to play other Eagles hits such as "Victim of Love" and "Peaceful Easy Feeling."

Felder also gave nods to other artists during the show. He dedicated a performance of "Tequila Sunrise" to Glenn Frey.

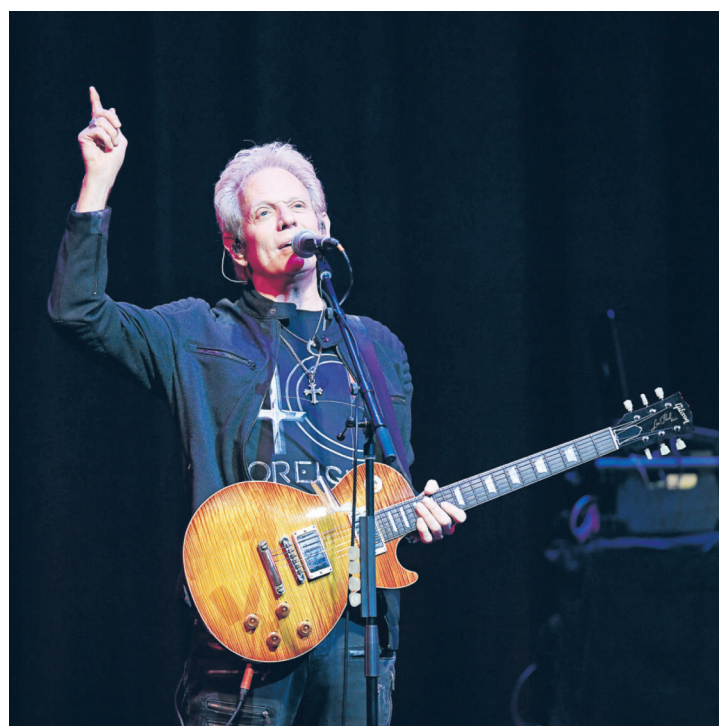

Felder switched out guitars for almost every song, gave insight and told stories about his career and time with the Eagles.

"Most of my memories from the '70s have this smoky haze around them for some reason," he joked.

Felder also played some of his solo work, including songs from his latest album, "American Rock 'n' Roll."

Felder said that he felt like American rock 'n' roll really started during Woodstock in 1969.

promoter, Victory Productions. They enjoy the harmonies and the lyrics of the Eagles' music.

"They tell nice stories and the lyrics are very entertaining and provoke images," Bob said.

Steve and JoAnne Hammes, of the Village of Dunedin, have seen the Eagles perform a few times before and wanted to check out Felder's show.

"He's considered an excellent guitarist," Steve said. And the Eagles wrote a lot of good tunes, he added.

"It's a good blend of rock 'n' roll and blues," he said. "It's easy to listen to and, of course, it was our genre growing up."

Felder himself grew up in Gainesville, a place that filled his memories with warm sunsets and Spanish moss.

"Just up the street from here," Felder said. "Every time I play this song, it reminds me of being back home."

And he launched into the Eagles' "Seven Bridges Road."
