

editor's note / FACE VALUE

Me and Lauren Fetterman
at this year's A-List Awards

After nine years, it's pretty clear that the A-List Awards is so much more than just an awards ceremony—it's a guaranteed opportunity to get together as a community, catch up in person and potentially parlay new contacts into new collaborators. If you partied with us at the extra-packed Palace Theatre this year, check out the event photos starting on page 28 and watch the recap video on athomefc.com.¶ The party may have ended on September 12, but for the athome team, our work was far from over. With the winners announced, we've created this special A-List edition, a comprehensive resource guide and visual directory of industry professionals and their awarded projects. Expect to be inspired by the stunning spaces dreamed up and executed by the best in our community. We also added a new online contest—the People's Pick—to the A-List roster as another way to celebrate innovative work brought to life by truly talented design pros; these winners—chosen by public voting—are revealed on page 144.¶ Last but not least, this year's amazing panel of judges—designers James Aman and John Meeks of Aman & Meeks, Amy Lau of Amy Lau Design, Eric Cohler of Eric Cohler Design, Jennifer Post of Jennifer Post Design, Brian Sawyer of Sawyer|Berson, and Vicente Wolf of Vicente Wolf Associates; architect Edward Siegel of Edward Siegel Architect; and landscape architects Mario Nievera and Keith Williams of Nievera Williams—committed their time and expertise to selecting our finalists and winners. We thank them, along with our emcee, New York Times bestselling author Jane Green, for her grace and wit on stage, and our sponsors, who made our elegant gala possible. ¶ As we pop one more bottle of champagne to mark the close of a fabulous year in design, we hope you celebrate with us. But don't party too hard—the call for entries for the 2019 A-List Awards will be here before you know it.

AMY VISCHIO
Creative/Editorial Director
amy.vischio@moffly.com