

editor's note / VIRTUALLY POSSIBLE

Amy Vischio

Collaborating with plenty of distance
between us!

Lauren Fetterman

late to the party?

You can still get in on the action!
Check out our a-list awards
ceremony online:

athomealistawards.com

Since 2010, our special A-List Awards issue has always been a treasure trove of inspiration. By highlighting the winners and finalists of our annual design competition (and crediting the professionals they partnered with on their amazing projects), this issue is essentially a little black book of vetted design pros in Fairfield County and beyond. Whether you're looking to update your kitchen, redesign your children's playroom or even embark on new construction, home improvement is on everyone's to-do list these days, and hiring an A-List team will ensure your next project is just what you need to feel at home.

Starting on page 32, we're showcasing the twenty-five winners and fifty-nine finalists of this year's competition. If you virtually partied with us during the awards ceremony, check out the submitted event photos starting on page 28, and if you missed it, visit athomealistawards.com to watch the full video of the ceremony. And though celebrating in person wasn't possible this year, we hope you will see—and feel—what this community celebration is all about.

Last but not least, we want to thank this year's amazing panel of judges—designers Mara Miller and Jesse Carrier of Carrier and Company, Damian and Britt Zunino of Studio DB, and Brian Sawyer of Sawyer|Berson; architect Edward Siegel of Edward Siegel Architect; and landscape architect Keith Williams of Nievera Williams—who committed their time and talents to selecting our finalists and winners. We thank them, along with our sponsors, who made our first-ever virtual ceremony possible. As we pop one more bottle of champagne to mark the close of our eleventh anniversary of A-List, we hope you will celebrate right along with us. It may be hard to believe, but the call for entries for the 2021 A-List Awards will be here before you know it.

AMY VISCHIO
Creative/Editorial Director
amy.vischio@moffly.com