Vermont is a well-known destination once snow begins to fall. Skiing, snowboarding, warming up in front of a fire in a rustic mountain lodge, and more can be found when the weather turns cold. However, did you know there's plenty to do during the summer as well? Let's check out some summer mountain fun in Vermont that you'll wish you'd known sooner.

- Notchville at Smugglers' Notch: A popular ski resort nestled in the Green mountains, Smugglers' Notch blossoms into a relaxing summer retreat as the temperature climbs. Ride bikes, swim and play on the Notchville splash pad, take an arts & crafts class, or indulge in a variety of gourmet dining options.
- Bromley Adventure Park: An amusement park on a mountain? You bet! Mt. Bromley in southern Vermont is a hotspot for thrills with its seemingly growing list of activities! Fly high on trampolines, play mini golf, hit the slopes on the famous alpine slides, or scale a 24' rock wall to kick things off. Or, if you'd rather, you can make a splash on the big 456' slide ride and let the kiddos enjoy bumper boats. The possibilities are endless!
- Gondolas and more in Stowe: For a more laid-back option, head north to Stowe and ride their gondolas to the sky (opening June 23rd, 2018). If you're feeling brave, you can head to the zip line or treetop adventures that are also offered. After you've worked up an appetite, head to Cliff House restaurant for beautiful panoramic views and fresh American cuisine.

Vermont is a picturesque state that not only offers a quiet retreat from the frantic pace of everyday life but has plenty to offer no matter which season you're in. From the breathtaking scenery to fine dining and a multitude of invigorating, outdoor recreation, you may never run out of things to do.
