

Reflection

I learned a lot of things from these experiments. First, the combination of thoughts, text, and images, even though it seems as they would not match at first, they can complement each other. For example, in the Juxtaposition experiment, I combined a phrase my aquafit instructor always says with socks I bought for my roommate. These elements have nothing in common, but by putting them together I created its own story. Second, I learned I could use unexpected items to create color. Nailpolish and old makeup are not traditional for art on paper, as they are for “art” in the body and face. Since I was no longer going to give them this specific use, I tried to experiment. The colors and textures ended up surprising me. From drawing every day I learned to pay more attention to my surroundings since these were the inspiration for most of my drawings. It kept me grounded. I also learned to take some time to reflect on my day, which is very relaxing as a busy day can go by very quickly. Although the black pen is my favorite, as I did in this assignment I will try to experiment with more color in the final assignments. I had limited colors to use this time but I intend to experiment with even more colors and textures use them strategically to affect the mood of each panel. I would also like to try mixing unexpected items since it is pleasant to create a unique combination.

- For all of the drawings paper from my MUJI pocketnote was used.

away with you!

ALL NIGHT

Shake me up side down like a soft drink

This is a person but this is not me,
is it?

Bive

like the song the ocean makes

When it leaves.

me.

ME

Give yourself a HUG

Make it 2 Sexy
