There have been many new additions to the main campus especially the long awaited bronze tiger sculpture. Former SGA President Katelyn Thompson says although she had many ideas on her platform, the first thing was to bring the tiger. To many the statue represents the Big Blue Pride demonstrated daily on campus and the strength of the entire Tennessee State University community even through a nationwide pandemic. It's that very spirit that led nationally recognized sculptor David Clark , who is also the creator of Tom The Tiger at the University Of Memphis to create this wonderful project..

Faculty, student leaders, and alumni arrived in their best big blue outfits to see their new monument. Following after a Prep rally, students chanted, marched and sang while walking to the new location of the Tiger. President Glenda Glover says the new Tiger adds much beauty and honor to the campus and she is very thrilled by the excitement of her student body. Although socially distanced, many students were able to see the 6 foot Tiger the very first day of unveiling. For many other students, they will have to wait to see this major artistic piece at a later date once Covid-19 ceases. But one thing that's for certain this Tiger represents the perseverance, diligence, pride and tenacity of a True TSU Tiger.
