

200 Word Review: Luna Sleeping Night Oil by Sunday Riley

Released to rave reviews and heralded as the new “holy grail” of skincare, Sunday Riley's Luna Sleeping Night Oil is the hot product of the moment. Claiming to soften and prevent wrinkles, increase firmness, and minimize pores, the oil is formulated with a bevy of natural ingredients, most importantly retinols and blue tansy that gives Luna its signature blue color.

To see if Luna lived up to its hype, I tested it for one week straight. What is immediately different about Luna is the time and attention it takes in comparison to other oils—because of its blue pigment, the product must be diligently worked into the skin and allowed to dry completely before sleeping. Once on the face, it sits nicely and offers the soothing feeling common with facial oils.

Working almost instantaneously, you can expect to awake with the much sought-after “glow from within” look. Skin immediately feels smoother and more refined, almost with a velvety texture. After a week of continuous use, I noticed my pore size had drastically been reduced and my complexion as a whole appeared more even and radiant.

Although it comes with quite a hefty price tag ($105.00/1 oz.), it seems Luna lives up to its praise. Its magical blend of ingredients and essential oils alone is a complexion's dream that awakens and refreshes even the most lackluster skin.
