SUSTAINABLY HARVESTED PALO SANTO

Bursera Graveolens or Palo Santo is a wild tree found in coastal South American regions. Myrrh, Copal, and Frankincense all belong to the same family as Palo Santo. In English, Palo Santo translates to holy wood. Inca Master Tea works diligently to sustainably harvest these Palo Santo sticks in Peru. After the tree dies, its spirit transforms, releasing its spiritual properties. No trees are cut down when harvesting Palo Santo. After a tree dies naturally, harvesting takes place. It's critical to purchase from a reputable brand you can trust, like Inca Master Tea.

THE BENEFITS OF PALO SANTO SMOKE

HOW TO BURN PALO SANTO INCENSE STICKS

To begin using these Palo Santo sticks, you'll first start by lighting a match. Next, hold the Palo Santo incense stick at a forty-five-degree angle to light it. Keep the Palo Santo match lit for anywhere from ten to thirty seconds, and then shake to blow it out. Place the burning Palo Santo incense cone stick in a fireproof holder burner container for safety purposes. Enjoy the sweet smells of Palo Santo smoke! Palo Santo can also be used for sprays, incense cones, and blended with essential oils.
