IAN FISHER: AMERICAN SOLDIER

By Craig F. Walker, Kevin Simpson, Michael Riley,
Bruce Finley of The Denver Post

Awarded the 2010 Pulitzer Prize for Feature Photography

From basic training to Iraq, this is your chance to own a Pulitzer Prize-winning collection of photography presenting a look at two years in the life of an American soldier. For 27 months, Denver Post staff photojournalist Craig F. Walker followed Coloradan Ian Fisher, as his life inside and outside of the U.S. Army unfolded.

As chronicled in The Denver Post, Walker and reporters, Kevin Simpson, Michael Riley and Bruce Finley followed Fisher's recruitment, induction, training, deployment and, finally, his return from combat. It is an intimate portrait of a teenager who joins the Army at the height of insurgent violence in Iraq and is poignantly searching for meaning and manhood.
