Red lipstick is a runway mainstay, and every season we look forward to seeing exactly which shades will come down the runway. But for Spring/Summer 2016, makeup artists were united in their choice: candy apple red was unequivocally the hue of the season. We're talking Snow White apple red, a bright, saturated colour with varying intensities of pink.

At Dolce & Gabbana, Pat McGrath pressed on magenta-tinted red with a satiny finish, and said her inspiration was "the joy of an Italian holiday!". At Jason Wu the girls wore a powdered, velvety shade that was more red than pink (ditto for the stay-in-place red at Céline), while at Acne Studios it was a deeper hue. Topshop Unique went for bang-on bright, with the brand's beauty consultant Hannah Murray describing the look as "Princess Margaret meets Courtney Love."

Three words sum up what we learned from the shows: less is more. "I think beauty's becoming less about piling on, and more about what's underneath," said makeup artist Yadim at Jason Wu. Rules for wearing the shade: keep the face clean, literally – skincare for freshness and foundation only where necessary; accent with ease – brushed up brows, a hint of blusher or transparent mascara and nothing more; and if you have to add something, make it flicked eyeliner like at Dolce & Gabbana – a timeless combo for any season. □

EDITOR'S TIPS

When picking a candy apple hue, consider your skin tone. Fair skin looks amazing with more pink, medium skin can rock just about any shade and dark skin is amazing with purplish hues.
