I bought this after someone said “you’ll laugh and cry.” I didn’t believe them. But then came Jenny’s refusal to marry Ben because of her tumor. Then Ben’s death in the marina fire. Then the damn line rising on the EKG screen. That scene. That scene. And just when you think the emotions are over, we meet Jay Smith—a boy who disappears into the streets like smoke. I didn’t expect this book to break me. But it did.
