Say Your Words to the Sun Ekun Richard

Say Your Words to the Sun is the first major solo show by Manchester-based artist Ekun Richard, featuring oil paintings on canvas and card, and one textile composition. "My intention with this show is to present a personal ode to nature, dedicated to the begetter of it all - the sun," Richard says. "It is my way of saying thank you to the sun, and appreciating everything she does for us. The life and nature she fosters inspire the colours I use, and the way I think and feel when creating my work." Warm, tactile shades of brown, ochre, terracotta, moss-green and dusty orange typify the paintings in this series, combined with a distinct language of bold, curving forms. The earthy, organic tones, applied with deep brush strokes, heighten the works' materiality, as if one could reach out to touch the surface of the paint and feel warm, sun-baked soil against one's fingers, or the comforting rays of the sun itself. "Oil painting allows me to build deep, rich colours by gradually adding layers of hue over time," says Richard. "I can spend hours mixing each colour as I add warmth and energy to my paintings. Colour is tied directly to energy, and for me, this energy comes from the complex structure and textures of the oils interacting with each other." The textile piece in Say Your Words to the Sun is handstitched and handdyed by Richard, using silk tree cotton grown in Basse, Gambia. "The idea behind my textiles is to create something using only natural materials," he says. "The organic dye is from plant matter, such as onion skins, which I might collect over a number of weeks. I like to be able to take these natural materials and turn them into something new. I stitch each aspect of the composition together, including strips of fabric made from braided wool. The work is completely from my hands." Richard's compositions begin as words that he writes in his sketchbook in response to his experiences and observations, which often become the title for each piece. Addressing the sun directly, such as You Are Always in the Sky, and Where You Rise and Set - or referring to the clouds, sky and earth, with Tell the Clouds to Go Away and We Are Just Two Rocks - the words behave like fragments of poetry, illustrating an intimate and touching connection between the artist and the natural world. "There is a grounded meaning to my abstract work, which I think is discernible through contemplation of these words," he says. "They offer a sense of narrative and a suggestion of delicacy and thought, which is all part of communicating the energy and substance of nature through my work."

> Manchester-based artist Ekun Richard relishes rich, earthy tones that celebrate the physicality of nature. Working with oil on card and canvas, as well as handstitched and hand-dyed textiles, his pieces exhibit a natural warmth and gentle sense of wit. His paintings begin as words, which set an emotional intention and often become the title of the piece. "I write a phrase in my sketchbook in response to what I observe and experience," says Richard. "The words remind me of the emotion of the situation, and the colours that were present, which allows me to recreate that moment as a painting."

> Richard studied graphic art and design at Leeds School of Art, and as part of the course, spent one year studying at the École Nationale Supérieure d'Art in Dijon, France. It was here that Richard created his first paintings, and began to truly define his artistic practice. "The course at Leeds was very open; initially I was exploring many different forms of screen printing," he says. "When I arrived in Dijon, where such facilities were no longer available to me, I began to figure out what I wanted to do with painting. I became meticulous about my practice, assessing each aspect of my work, from the ratios of the paper to the mixing of the colours."

> Richard has exhibited his work in London, Manchester and Dijon. Before painting, he explored street photography around Leeds, which taught him the art of composition. "Some of the photographers I was investigating at the time, such as Alex Webb, compose their photographs so well," he says. "Everything is balanced between the foreground, background, high and low, all within the confines of a 35mm frame. That is what I hope to achieve in my work: a balanced composition, with a sense of depth. In a way, my paintings, which share similarities to landscapes and still lifes, bear a semblance to photography in their conception: I aim to take a snapshot of a moment, a fleeting feeling or emotion, and transform that into a painting."
