GALLIONS PLACE

ROYAL ALBERT WHARF, E16

An exciting riverside community, on the doorstep of The City, Gallions Place brings you the best of urban London in a reimagined corner of historic East London.

GALLIONS PLACE BE PART OF IT

In the heart of Royal Albert Wharf, an historic and distinctive corner of East London, where old traditions meet contemporary vision, sits Gallions Place - a landmark new development offering unparalleled living and a community to call home.

Brimming with potential both for 21st Century business and creative entrepreneurs, this bustling hub of modern homes, restaurants, cafes and riverside gardens, offers all you need for an exciting yet relaxing urban lifestyle.

With superb connections to the rest of the capital, living here really does bring you the best of everything.

A landmark new development offering unparalleled living and a community to call home.

A PLACE WHERE CANOES AND KAYAKS HAVE REPLACED CONTAINER SHIPS

While canoes and kayaks have replaced the container ships that once docked here, and planes into City Airport have superseded the big old passenger ships, a real sense of history and community remains.

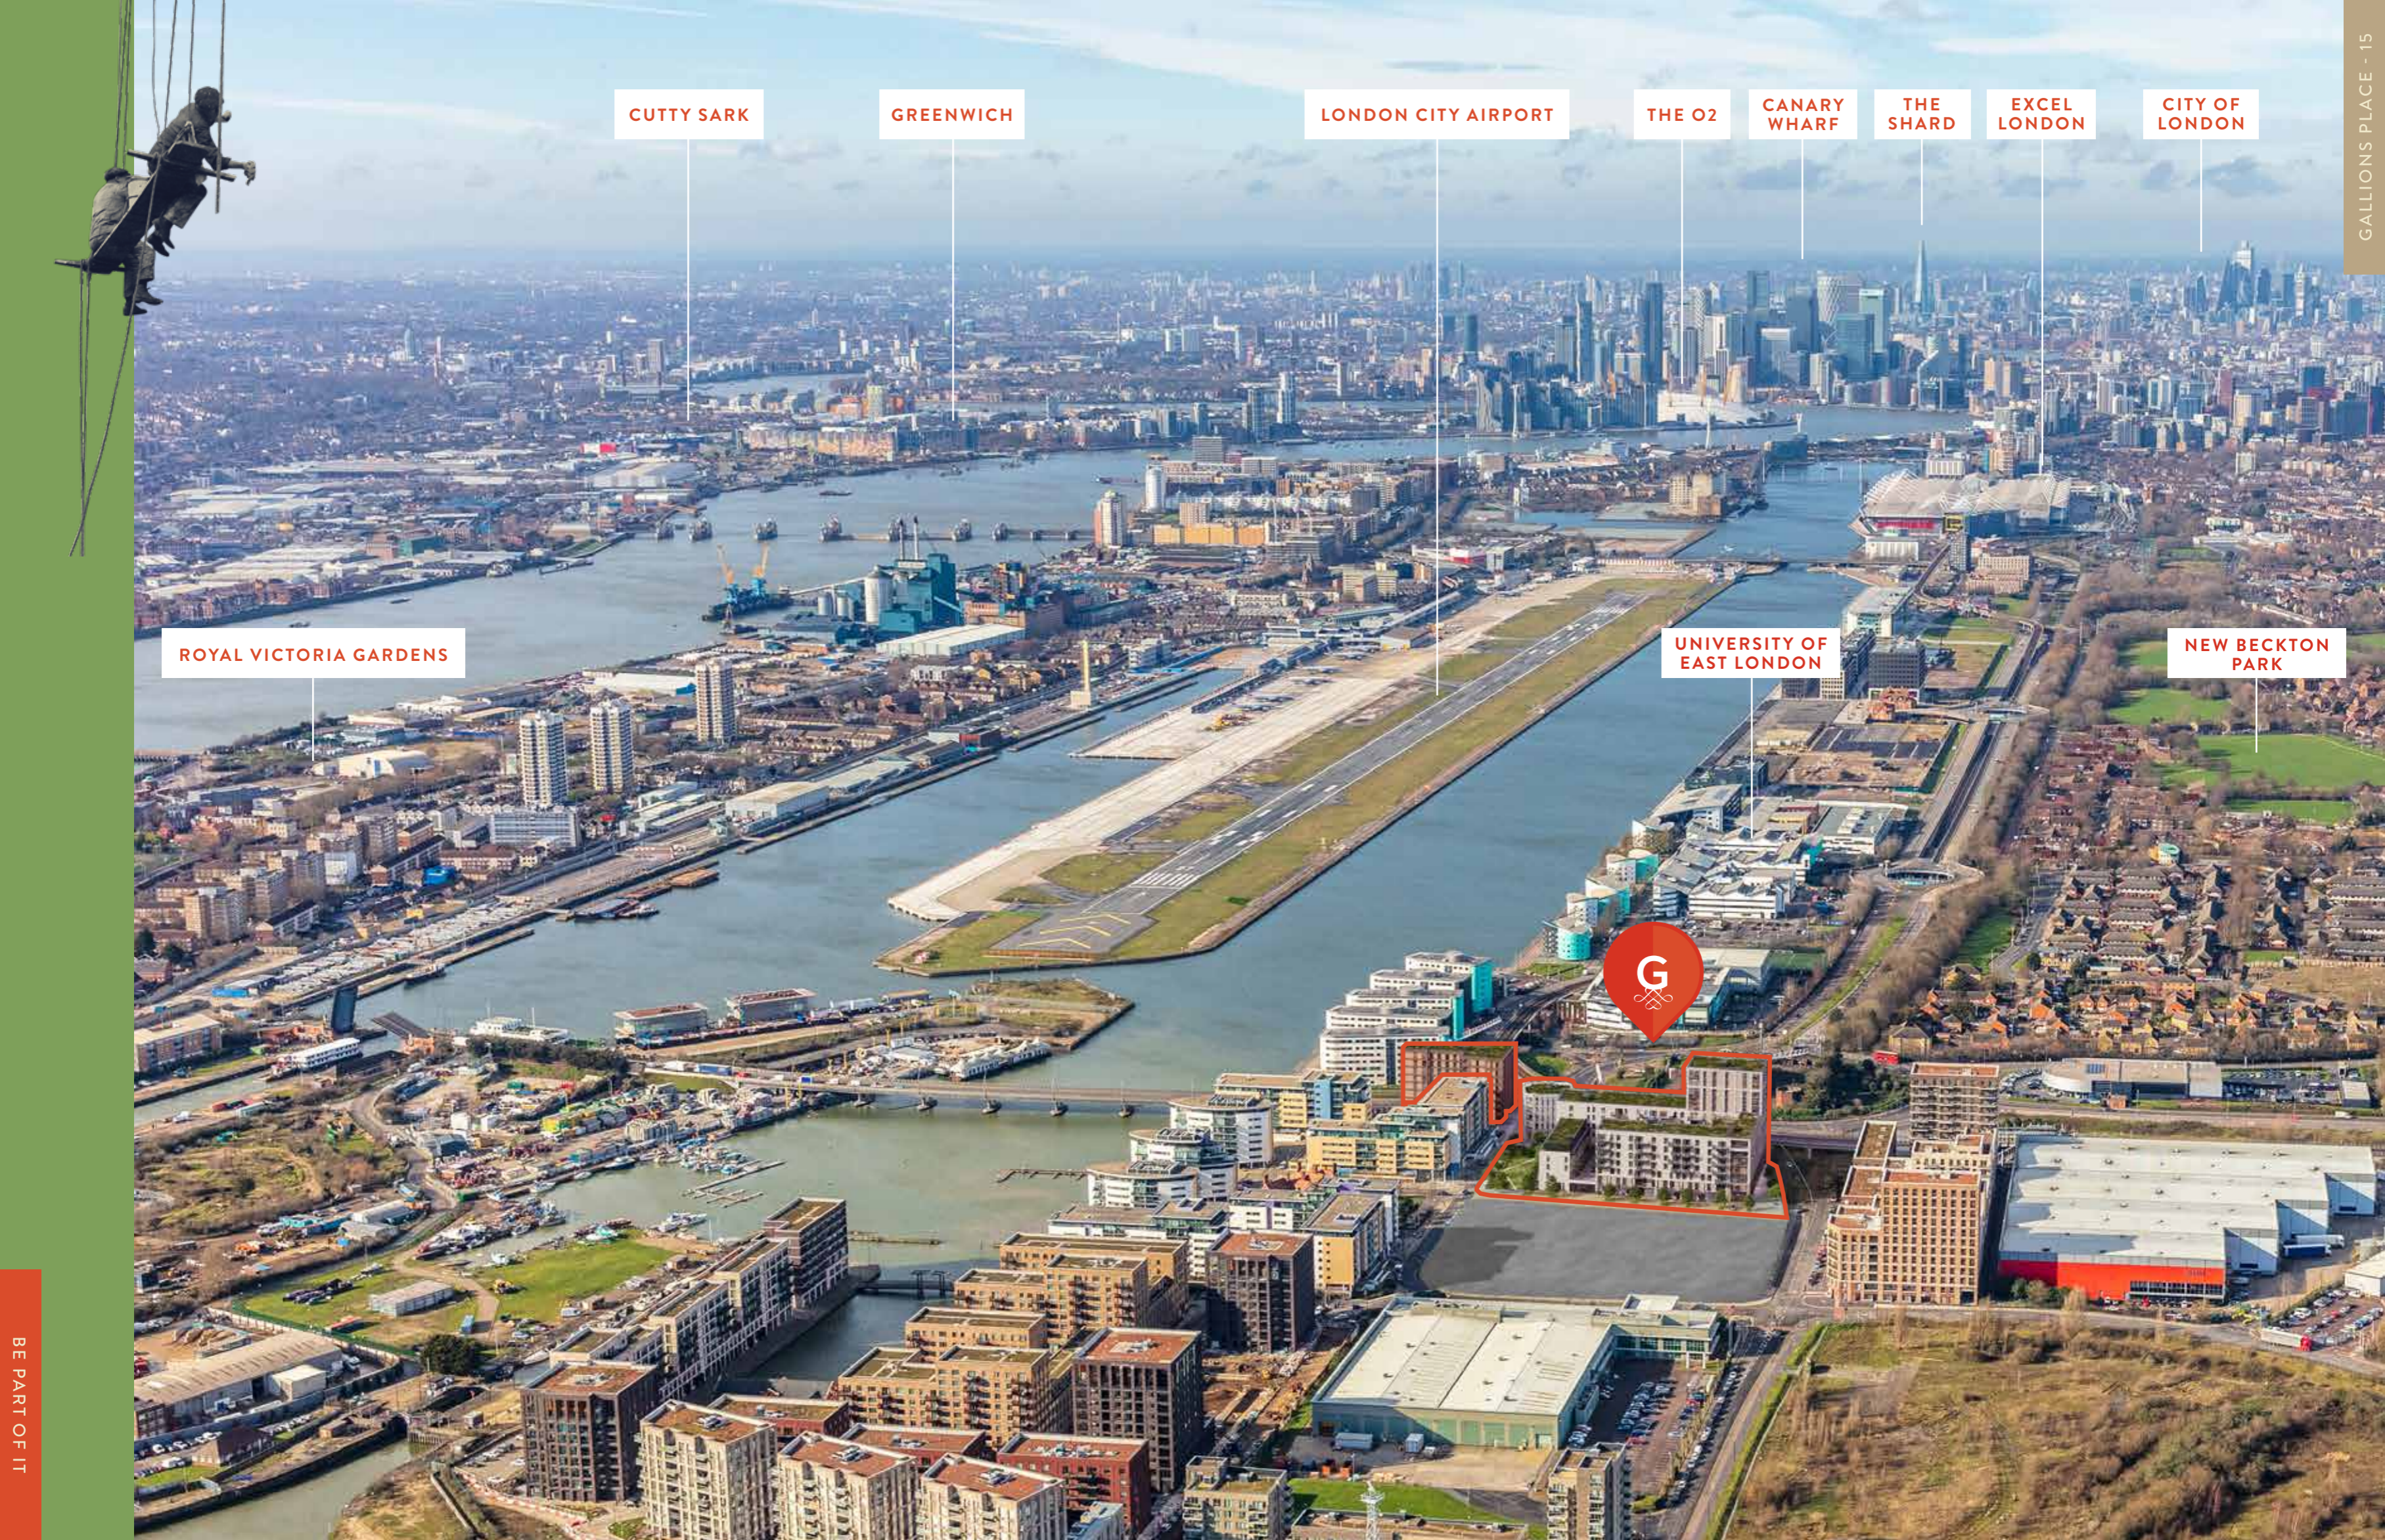

A NEW NEIGHBOURHOOD

The meeting place of the serenity of the Thames and the character of the Royal Docks, Royal Albert Wharf has fast become one of London's most innovative and atmospheric waterside destinations.

Adding another exciting chapter in the new history of the Docks, this hub of innovation and regeneration has been carefully conceived around the creative community that now call this characterful yet tranquil neighbourhood home.

A FUTURE BUILT FROM THE PAST

Once the largest enclosed docks in the world and London's great industrial heartland, The Royal Docks are going through rapid and exciting changes thanks to one of Europe's most significant urban development projects. Combining impressive investment and visionary planning, this thriving commercial and cultural waterfront district now offers a new way to live and work.

WHERE INNOVATION THRIVES

Once a great centre for shipbuilding and maritime industry, The Royal Docks is thrusting into the future to become London's 21st Century business hub propelled both by huge investment, infrastructure and ideas. A sure sign of its high regard is the imminent arrival of the Mayor of London's office, which moves to the area in 2022.

A £8 billion vision that is becoming a reality, the Royal Dock's economic renaissance is being driven the Asian Business Port. Forging new links with the Asia-Pacific region, it will see the Royal Docks join the City and Canary Wharf as London's third business district.

It's a future founded on innovation and doing things differently. Along from the Excel Centre, is its futuristic neighbour The Crystal a sustainable cities initiative and pop up innovation hub by Siemens.

A new commercial district running beside London City Airport, RAD Centre, houses offices and workspaces for an array of small businesses. Nearby is Expressway a complex of workspaces and studios in a concrete building that wouldn't be out of place in Hackney Downs.

A £22 billion vision that is becoming a reality.

LONDON MADE EASY

In addition to the huge investment and regeneration, The Royal Docks future is being founded on its fantastic transport links, connecting across London by tube, DLR, rail, bike, boat and even cable car.

With commutes into the City taking less than 15 minutes and quick links into the rest of London, you have more time to enjoy life – whether it’s a morning yoga session or a late afternoon trip into the West End.

When the Elizabeth Line of Cross Rail arrives in 2022 it will bring the rest of London even closer with trains into Liverpool Street taking 10 minutes and Heathrow Airport 45.

For a novel and picturesque way to get to work, the Thames Clipper whisks commuters down the river to Canary Wharf, London Bridge, and Waterloo. Or for more even more dramatic views take the Emirates Air Line cable car that crosses the river to Greenwich Peninsula home of the O2. And with London City Airport right next door your business and holiday options are all made easy.

STAY CONNECTED

With a DLR station just 1 minute's walk away from home, Gallions Place already enjoys superb connectivity into Central London and beyond. Add to this Crossrail's imminent arrival, and life in Royal Albert Wharf continues to offer the perfect balance of tranquil waterside living in quick reach of the very best that the capital has to offer.

A PLACE WHERE YOU CAN TAKE THE NIGHT OFF FROM COOKING

With a diverse selection of restaurants, gastropubs, coffee shops and bars, there's little you couldn't ask for in this bustling locale. Whether it's dinner for two, a night out with friends, or a lazy Sunday's pub lunch there's something for everyone and every occasion too.

A DAY IN YOUR LIFE

Whatever the season, your Dockside locale provides an atmospheric backdrop to your days out. Strolling along the waterside while bumping into new friends after a morning run around the Wharf, this is city living as it should be.

A great breakfast or brunch option right on your doorstep is The Chocolate Factory Shop of the Well Bean Café, experts in all things cocoa. Looking out onto the tranquil waters of the Upper Dock, it's a minimal but cosy place to plan your day ahead. Don't forget to grab an Organic Well Bean Bar before you go. It's even got its own beach.

It wouldn't be East London without a brewery and tap room. When you're sipping on a hoppy ale at the fiercely independent Husk Brewery remember the Docks were where the first IPAs were shipped.

Exploring the docks can be hungry work. With a dockside terrace and a modern British menu, Galyons Bar & Kitchen excels at dishes like Salt & Pepper Squid. Another great option is The Windjammer, with huge windows overlooking the docks and a lovely seating area outside it's the kind of local gastro pub where long friendships are made.

An Old Fashioned as the sun goes down over the river or a cosy craft ale to warm up winter; nights around the Docks are always something special. The kind of waterside spot you might find in Red Hook, Brooklyn, or Neukölln, Berlin, The Oiler Bar is an old converted boat with wood panelled interiors and dramatic views across Victoria Dock.

YOUR CREATIVE COMMUNITY

Shaped by its geography and history, the Royal Docks is a proudly different corner of East London taking on much of its neighbours' artistic invention.

Start with a long walk around the Dockside, discovering the four public artworks created by Jessie Brennan. Entitled Making Space, the works were created by Brennan to celebrate the people who live and work here.

In the same building as The Chocolate Factory, RAW Labs is the kind of creative hub you would find in Hackney, with artists studios and a strong connection to the community. Come here for exhibitions, workshops, drawing classes and film screenings.

On a summer's day it's hard not to be tempted by one of the club's open water swimming mornings.

TIME TO UNWIND

With jogging paths weaving through the historic streets, long cycle routes alongside the river and waterfront parks for al fresco yoga or Pilates, it's easy to feel good here.

A short walk past the sailboats on Gallions Point Marina are Royal Victoria Gardens where tree-lined paths down to the waterfront pass play areas, a paddling pool, and tennis courts.

One of London's most atmospheric riverside parks, the gardens of Thames Barrier Park are the vision of Parisian landscape architect Allain Provost and Patel Taylor. Sit beside the wildflower meadows while looking out onto the iconic silver hued Thames barrier.

Pick up the Royal Wharf Walk here and head west to the Pier soaking in the history and taking in the views before reaching Lyle Park, donated by Sir Leonard Lyle to workers in his sugar factory in the 1920s.

To fully experience the river, head to Docklands Sailing and Watersports Centre with courses in everything from sailing to paddle boarding. On a summer's day it's hard not to be tempted by one of the club's open water swimming mornings.

At night, come here for the renowned restaurants making the best of the impressive dockside setting, like Rokawho have made an art of Northern Japanese Robatayaki cuisine, Plateau a refined French bistro with breath taking cityscape views, or Iberica where Chef Nacho Manzano creates inventive tapas inspired by the seasons. The Street Food revolution has also well and truly arrived with Kerb food and Giant Robot both having outposts here. Afterwards why not round the night off in style with cocktails at The Alchemist “masters in the dark arts of molecular mixology”.

THE OTHER WHARF

Much more than a leading world centre for business, Canary Wharf brings you the best of London just a short hop away on the DLR. Spend a morning walking around the attractive gardens and riverside boardwalks, scattered with public artworks.

For something really different set the alarm and head to Billingsgate, the world’s oldest fish market, before bacon and scallops at Piggy’s café. You’re now ready for some serious shopping and with all the big brands as well as independent boutiques you might decide the West End can wait.

DISCOVER THE EAST

East London's creative renaissance began in Shoreditch now a well-established area of urban cool despite most of the artists moving further East into Hackney. Exploring these ever changing areas of East London makes for a great day out.

With its vast array of organic food stalls, quirky cafes, neighbourhood pubs, and vintage curios, Broadway Market is the perfect weekend trip. Join the hipsters in the queue at Climpson & Sons, who are at the forefront of London's specialty coffee scene. Or head to Brick Lane for vintage stalls, street art, and independent boutiques.

The East's creative trajectory has now reached Stratford. As well as Westfield, it's home to the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park. Alongside the grasslands and world-class arenas is the East Village cultural district. Here you will find a vibrant café culture at spots like Tina We Salute You next to The Dark Horse, a Brooklyn style bar with exposed pipework and concrete walls.

If you want to feel the atmosphere of the old East End head to Limehouse, just 15 minutes away on the DLR. Near the boats on Limehouse Basin is Narrow Street home of actor Sir Ian McKellen's gastropub The Grapes next to an elegant Georgian terrace.

MAKING LEARNING EASY

As well as a 21st Century centre for business, The Royal Docks is an interconnected hub of learning. At its heart is University of East London just a stone's throw from Gallions Place. As well as offering over 130 courses from science, to sports and creative industries, it houses state of the art facilities like Sports Dock, part of the London 2010 Olympic legacy. But it's not just a world class university that the Docks are home to, and from small nurseries to community focused high schools the area has an impressive list of education choices.
