Professional guidance from an advisor can help you shape up your retirement account.

If you feel you don't have the time or knowledge to manage your retirement account, consider working with an advisor.

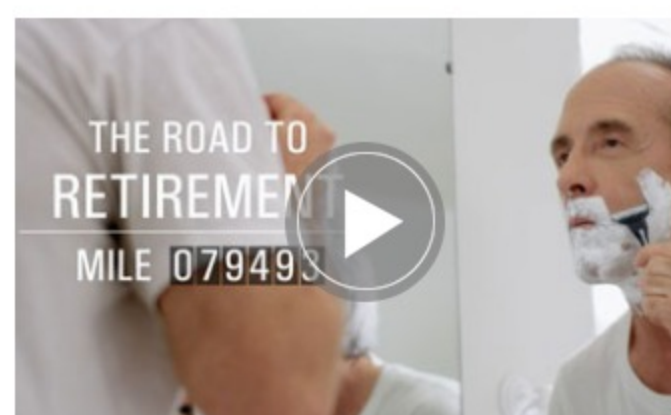

Life gets busy – you may not have the time or resources to effectively manage your retirement on your own. In fact, in a recent study, less than half of the employees surveyed said they had calculated the amount of money they will need to save for a comfortable retirement.<sup>1</sup>

When you work with an advisor, they will work with you to:

- > Analyze your current strategy
- > Determine your retirement goals
- > Understand your risk tolerance and advise you on what types of investments are appropriate for you
- > Develop a specific plan that will help you get on track toward the retirement you envision

The road to retirement can be a complicated journey at times – having a trusted advisor to guide you can help you feel more confident that you are making the best decisions for your financial future.
