"The Little Prince" by Antoine de Saint-Exupéry

"The Secret Garden" by Frances Hodgson Burnett

"Pooh's Grand Adventure" by A.A. Milne / Catherine McCafferty

"On the Night You Were Born" by Nancy Tillman

At University of Virginia Children's Hospital, we know it's often the littlest among us who have the biggest hearts, the biggest fears and even bigger dreams. We are witness to their kindness, bravery and hope each and every day. This is what inspires us, what drives us to provide children with every possible solution to make them better and keep them well. Big and small, they are our reason for being.

When we set out to create a new space to care for children and their families, we envisioned an environment that was inviting, but also inspiring — because we know there are times when a little escape into the imagination is the very best medicine. And where better to find an adventure than in the pages of a book?

That's why each floor of the new Battle Building features imagery and interactive activities based on some of our favorite storybooks. Children can lose themselves in a game of I Spy or hike in a secret garden. They can escape without worry because between the lines, we are here, feet firmly planted with one single mission: to provide them with the very best in pediatric care.

Sincere thanks to all of our generous donors, especially the Ivy Foundation, for making this dream a reality.

Everyone, no matter how small, has a voice.

Only with compassion
can you provide care that is gentle and true.

With every new discovery
comes the hope that anything is possible.

When we have faith in each other,
no challenge is too great.

Every child is unique and deserves specialized care.
