Dental Bio Example 1

One of the newest professionals in our practice, sector left a successful career in business to become a dentist after her own experience as an adult orthodontics patient.

Despite her business success, work felt empty for her. As her orthodontic treatment progressed, she realized how much it improved her confidence and that she was smiling far more than she used to. Because her own treatment experience impacted her so much, decided she wanted a career that would allow her to improve other people's lives through beautiful smiles as well.

Enthusiastic about pursuing her new career, and her husband moved from Wisconsin, the home of her favorite NFL team (Green Bay Packers), to Arizona, where she completed dental school at Midwestern University and received awards for research in dental teeth hypersensitivity. The also participated in a range of community service projects while in school, notably providing dental care at a clinic where she worked directly with victims of domestic violence and sexual assault.

Today, offering patients personalized care and an empathetic ear is of the utmost importance to Exercise who was plagued with many cavities as a child and is no stranger to being a nervous dental patient.

As a dental provider, she aims to help patients with dental fears through a gentle and comprehensive approach. Before starting any treatment plan, she works to understand the full picture of each patient's situation and to help educate patients on what their dental options entail.

doesn't worry about feeling empty in her career anymore. She knows she's making a difference every day. One of her most memorable cases involved a middle-aged man whose drug-damaged teeth seemed to limit his employability and likelihood of maintaining a relationship, even though he was educated and well-spoken. After a few short dental visits for cleaning and restorations, the man's life began to change. Soon enough, he'd gained confidence, met the love of his life, gotten married, and found a job. More than three years later, loves knowing the man maintains his dental health and looks forward to being part of other life-changing transformations.

When she's not working, you can find watching football, cooking, boating and jet skiing, getting creative with arts and crafts, hiking with Levi (her affectionate Goldendoodle), watching Netflix documentaries, or spending time with her husband preparing for their new baby.

Fun fact: As a child, loved caring for all kinds of animals.

"I had multiple guinea pigs, hamsters, gerbils, dogs, reptiles and butterflies, Monarch butterflies to be exact. I would find caterpillars and feed them milkweed until they formed a chrysalis then release them once they emerged."

Memberships:

American Dental Association Academy of General Dentistry Arizona Dental Association The American Association for Women in Dentistry Chicago Dental Society