Look, we have history. Me and her, we've been connected at the hip for as long as I can remember and I'm happy with us just being friends, believe me. I mean she's got a boyfriend now and though I know I could treat her better I'm not going to get into it because I'm completely over her. Anyways let's talk about something else, You know I applied for a job at Target the other day, I figured it was about time I found some work, everyone else around me is working. You know she works at Dunkin Donuts right? I remember I went to visit her there once and...wow. She didn't even have any makeup on, but just seeing her...My stomach dropped and not in the bad way, it was a good feeling. I came in and we talked for what felt like hours. That's the thing with her I never get bored when I'm with her, we could sit in silence for hours and I'd be ecstatic, ya know? But enough about her, I've actually got a game this Saturday my entire family's coming and a few of my friends. (Pauses) I used to go to her games all the time and I mean all the time. She used to get so happy when she'd see me there, her eyes would light up and she's got the most beautiful eyes, believe me. It's like a angel shit in her (pauses) Okay that wasn't the most romantic thing to say, but you get what I mean. On one of her games I brought her flowers that matched her eyes. Her angel shit eyes, okay, okay I get it. That term isn't working.(He smiles to himself) She was so damn happy and seeing her happy made me even more happy. Okay we're definitely getting off track here, just stop bringing her up, okay? I'm over her, I don't want to talk about her. Sure she's beautiful, sure we'd be a perfect fit, sure it hurts like hell to see her with someone else, but that's just the way things are and that's the way they'll stay so there's no point in obsessing over it. (He pauses deep in thought and then..) One last thing, I really, really wish things were different.
