

St. Paul Midway, c. 2005

While other companies were in the midst of downsizing, Menards opened its first reverse two-story store in St. Paul, Minn., in 2005. In only a few short months, Menards was able to transform an old Knox lumber lot into a prolific 230,000 square-foot superstore. This double-decker store not only provided more than enough space for their extensive product line, but it also featured an equipment rental center and moving walkways for both Guests and shopping carts.
