Taylor Swift performed in front of a sold-out Levi's Stadium crowd in Santa Clara on Friday as part of her Eras Tour.

Sparks fly as Swift enchants

A mother-daughter duo gave a nod to Swift's song "ME!" dressed as a chickens.

Michaela Vatcheva/Special to The Chronicle Kayley Riddle sported colorful bracelets in reference to some of Swift's music catalog.

Two hours after her delayed flight from New York landed, Charlie Detelich was decked out in a yellow-feathered chicken costume at Levi's Stadium in Santa Clara for "Taylor Swift Weekend."

Although she had lost her luggage and was struggling with jet lag, she was happily roaming the home of the 49ers for the first of two Eras Tour concerts on Friday, July 28, with her mother, Dana, who was sporting a matching look. They had originally come up with the idea in 2019 - complete withhand-painted leather vests that read, "Cool Chicks," a nod to a lyric in Swift's song "ME!" — when planning to attend Swift's Loverfest tour the following summer. Then COVID hit and that tour got canceled.

But the singer's Bay Area Eras Tour stop gave them another chance.

"I said, 'Well, what's your vision of a 'Cool Chick'? and we sent pictures to each other," Dana said. "Mine was a chicken and hers was leather jackets, so we did a mashup."

The mother-daughter duo have been attending Swift concerts together since the 2011 "Speak Now" tour, with Friday marking Charlie's seventh Swift show. They were among the more than 100,000 to attend Swift's highly anticipated local performances during her Santa Clara stint, where the record-shattering singer broke curfew two nights in row. Whatever the penalty to the singer or the NFL team for defying the city noise ordinance, some industry insiders speculate her concerts will result in the biggest economic impact on the Bay Area since Super Bowl 50.

Thousands of devoted fans, known as Swifties, arrived hours before gates opened at 4:30 p.m. both days, braving the sweltering heat to show off their elaborate costumes, take photos and trade friendship bracelets. Inspired by a line in "You're on Your Own Kid," off 2022's "Midnights," Swifties have been making the beaded bracelets featuring song titles and references to Swift's career.

Jessica Christian/The Chronicle

Swift blew past curfew both nights of her concerts in Santa Clara.

Saratoga resident Nyna Velamuri was adorned with a few friendship bracelets on each arm to complete her look that consisted of a homemade "Junior Jewels" T-shirt, reminiscent of the one Swift wore in her 2008 "You Belong With Me" music video. To match Swift's shirt, which was filled with the signatures of her friends in the video, Velamuri got fellow Swifties at the show to sign her shirt.

"The fan base of Taylor Swift is just so wholesome and nice, and I feel like everyone we've interacted with is so sweet," she said. "It's just so beautiful to see everyone come together."

Maygan Brandt also made her own outfit, crocheting a vest with stripes on the front representing the color of each of Swift's 10 albums and the album's names in their corresponding fonts on the back.

"I've never made a piece of crocheted clothing before, so I didn't have a pattern, which was kind of crazy. But I decided to go for it," the Tracy resident said, noting that she started crocheting it on and off in March.

As the extravagantly dressed concertgoers filled the stadium during Gracie Abrams' and Haim's opening acts, anticipation for Swift's set began to build. About half an hour before Swift began playing on Friday, fans broke into a stadium-wide wave. Then when Lady Gaga's "Applause," the last song on Swift's preshow play list, blasted through the speakers, Swifties rushed to their seats. By 8:10 p.m., they were rewarded as Swift kicked the night off with a medley of prerecorded vocals spotlighting each of her albums. Since her last visit in 2018, Swift has released seven albums, including three re-recordings of her classic works, and the Eras Tour spans them all.

"When I was putting out so many albums one after another after another in a time when we couldn't tour, I had so many people say to me, 'Oh, what are you gonna do now? Just do a show where you play all of the albums and it's a  $3\frac{1}{2}$ hour show? '" Swift teased Friday night. "Yes. Yes, that's exactly what we're gonna do. It's gonna be called the Eras Tour."

The pop superstar could hardly keep the grin off her face during her performances both nights, and her energy was infectious.

"When you (cheer), or you sing along to the songs, it makes me feel like I'm not alone," Swift told the crowd, dismissing rumors that she was ready to give up making music. "I've had some of the best memories of my life on this tour."

The admiration was clearly mutual as the Bay Area made every effort to make the singer feel welcome well before she hit the stage Friday, even temporarily renaming the city "Swiftie Clara" and giving her the title of honorary mayor. During her final Santa Clara show, she admitted that while she typically avoids reading stories about herself, people close to her shared the local stories about the tributes.

"They'll be like 'Hey, did you know they changed Santa Clara to Swiftie Clara for two days? They Swift continues on B10

O'Connor was punished for speaking a truth

It is the moment that for many defined Sinéad O'Connor.

In 1992, the Irish singer took the stage at "Saturday Night Live" to sing Bob Marley's "War." Her a cappella rendition exposed every fluid bend, every wailing undercurrent in her voice, turning the already powerful song into a haunting new version. With her head shaved and wearing a long, white lace dress, she was a starkly beautiful, fierce warrior spirit, hardened by anger but animated by the music emanating from her.

Then while singing the lyrics, "good over evil," she pulled out a photo of Pope John Paul II and tore it apart three times and tossed the pieces in the air, then proclaimed: "Fight the real enemy."

The audience responded with total silence.

TONY BRAVO STAFF COLUMNIST

She later confirmed that the performance and destruction of the photo was meant as a statement against the sexual violence against children perpetrated by members of the Catholic Church.

The reaction was swift. NBC, the show's network, received 4,400 calls about the performance, and she was banned from appearing on the program again, with her performance cut for the West Coast airing and subsequent broadcasts. O'Connor was condemned as anti-Catholic by many for her statements, although she had been raised Catholic and her mother, whom O'Connor accused of abusing her as a child, kept the same papal portrait on her wall, as she disclosed in her 2021 memoir, "Rememberings." The photo showed the pontiff with his arms raised in the air, red capelet lifted by the wind behind him.

After that TV appearance, she went from the height of her fame to being booed onstage at a Bob Dylan tribute concert days later, and being threatened with violence by the likes of Catholic celebrities Joe Pesci and Frank Sinatra. Even Madonna said she disapproved of her actions.

Nearly a decade later, when the epidemic of child abusers in the priesthood was exposed — plus coverups by the Catholic Church in the United States, Europe and O'Connor's native Ireland — she was proved correct. In early 2000, Pope John Paul II even apologized for the church's actions to victims.

But by that point, the damage to O'Connor had been done. It's never easy being a Cassandra, and O'Connor's rise and rapid fall from pop-culture grace demonstrate that almost too neatly.

O'Connor never really took a victory lap amid all the disclosures about the church, because what victory was it, really? The abuse happened, and O'Connor was punished for speaking about it. Those facts wouldn't change.

The 2022 documentary about her life titled "Nothing Compares" and "Rememberings," are about as close as she got to saying, "I told you so." In the latter, O'Connor wrote that "I feel that having a No. 1 record derailed my career, and my tearing the photo put me back on the right track."

Her later years were hard. In 2018, she continued to struggle with issues of religion and converted to Islam, changing her name to Shuhada' Sadaqat in 2018, but still using O'Connor professionally. In addition to a range of mental health conditions, O'Connor lost her son Shane Lunny at age 17 to suicide in 2022.

Her last tweet before her death on Wednesday, July 26, said that she had been "living as an undead night creature" since her son's death and that they were "one soul in two halves. ... I am lost in the bardo without him."

We punish people who speak against big institutions, especially religious ones. We punish women who talk out of turn. We punish artists who go against commercialism to make controversial statements. O'Connor was punished for all those reasons.

A cause of death for the singer has not yet been released, but one hopes that with all the exposure of crimes by the church in the 21st century that there at least came peace for O'Connor in the end.

Her life was complicated, and her work as an artist was too. Should she be defined by this one performance and statement? No. But she should be given credit for speaking a horrible truth at a time when few others were brave enough to do so.

MISS MANNERS By Judith Martin

Finish the never-ending story with tact

Dear Miss Manners: I try to be friendly and courteous when hailed or greeted by strangers, and I try to listen respectfully to their tales of days gone by. But I do begin to tire at the third or fourth iteration of the same story, and I begin to chafe at the forced camaraderie.

In one encounter, I was enjoying an adult beverage at a favorite establishment when I was hailed by a gentleman admiring both my jacket and my walking cane. Feeling flattered, I thanked him for the compliments and provided a very brief anecdote about each item. I thought he might enjoy that, be on his way and leave me to the correspondence in which I had been engaged. Instead, I was treated to

Might Miss Manners be able to suggest a graceful but effective way of extricating myself from a conversation that bears a closer resemblance to "The Neverending Story?"

Gentle Reader: You met the Ancient Mariner! Miss Manners wondered what had become of him.

As you will recall from high school English what? "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner" is no longer required reading? Is it because Mr. Coleridge was likely on opium when he wrote it? Medical opium, of course. Or perhaps because readers too readily identified with the Wedding Guest who is trying desperately to break away from a bore with an endlessly repeated tale?

As Miss Manners does recall, the message was tolerance of all creatures, including bores as well as albatrosses.

She is therefore pleased that you listened politely, as long as could have been reasonably expected, to someone who was both lonely and forgetful, and then provided a decent excuse to stop.

also made you the mayor,' "Swift said Saturday. "It's really cool and it's really nice of your city to do that. Very, very cute."

This may have been an exciting surprise for the singer, but for Swifties, the most important surprise was yet to come.

One of the memorable moments during this tour has been the acoustic performances of the show, when Swift plays two surprise songs that aren't on the regular set list. On Friday night, she brought out Aaron Dessner, her longtime friend and collaborator, for her first surprise song, "Right Where You Left Me" off "Evermore," which he produced and co-wrote.

"The fact that she played 'Right Where You Left Me' changed my whole life, and I'll never recover," said Jordan Nicodemus, who traveled from Sacramento for the show. "It was the best night of my whole life."

> formed it on her "Red" tour in 2013.

ONLINE EXTRA

During the "Evermore" portion of the show, she also brought back out the Haim sisters for their collaboration "No Body, No Crime," which Swift added to the Eras Tour set list last weekend when the pop rock trio joined the tour. Dressed in bright ball gowns shaped like pastries, fans delighted in seeing Haim in their costumes from their cameo in Swift's "Bejeweled" music video. (Though the band also joined Swift on Saturday, they wore the same outfits from their opening set.)

But there was one more surprise in store for fans — and Swift at Levi's Stadium: A fireworks display from neighboring amusement park Great America that lit up the sky both nights during her "Speak Now" and "Red" sets.

"Do you know why they're doing that?" she quipped Saturday. "It's because I'm the mayor." Medha Upadhyay saw Swift at Levi's Stadium for her "Reputation" tour in 2018 and recalled a similar experience with Great America's fireworks coinciding with the concert. The San Jose resident said she enjoyed the coincidence so much that she bought her Friday ticket with it in mind.

Eras Tour date, she did stumble over the lyrics of the fan-favorite halfway through, which, according to her own rules, means it is fair game for future surprise song segments during her remaining Eras Tour dates.

Friday night's second surprise song, played on the piano, was "Castles Crumbling," a vault track off "Speak Now." On Saturday, she rounded out Santa Clara's surprises with "Stay Stay Stay," from her album "Red," and "All Of The Girls You Loved Before," an originally unreleased "Lover" track that Swift dropped on March 17 before hitting the road for the Eras Tour.

"Stay Stay Stay" was the only surprise song of the weekend Swift had previously performed live, having last per"Hearing 'Long Live' live, I was just immediately sobbing," Upadhyay said. "With the Great America fireworks in the back, it was just like, chef's kiss."
