Green Mountain Dairy Farm Is Set Up Nicely

Bill Rowell & Brian Rowell grew up on a farm in Albany, Vermont so they were already passionate about farming. They created the Green Mountain Dairy Farm in the year 1999 and they made sure to get their cows extremely comfortable. So their cattle have amazingly clean stalls with plenty of the best bedding ever. They have 3 barns for the cow-milking & they have special roofs that draw the summer heat from inside of the barns to keep the cattle cool. Plus they have 1 barn for the heifers and calves.

They even put 0.75 inch mats of the elastic type on the floors of the stalls and their livestock appreciates that. The Green Mountain Dairy Farm gives milk to the St Albans Cooperative Creamery often. They have 1,500 acres that goes through Sheldon, Highgate, Swanton, & St Albans and they are growing a plethora of corn & hay. Their business was well-planned out from the beginning so they have gained accolades.

They set plenty of goals & accomplished those. They overcame obstacles & kept going strong. In 2007, they started using a methane digester to keep their dairy farm lit up with electricity which brings about 1.8 kilowatts of power every year. They're linked with the CVPS Cow Power. They do care about ecology so they found a way to use the company Ben & Jerry's waste water in the Green Mountain Dairy Farm's digester.

Some of Their Accomplishments

In 2008, they retrieved the accolade Vermont Dairy of the Year. In 2015, they shipped 27 million pounds of lots of the terrific milk because their dairy's master-key focus is very top quality. A plethora of people got an invitation to their farmhouse for breakfast vittles in the year 2016. In April 2020, Green Mountain Dairy received a Paycheck Protection Program loan in the amount of $178,262 to keep 26 employees on their staff. The People's Trust Company of St Albans issued them that so needed blessing & I believe that they help make their days go much better.

More than 30,000 people have come to the Green Mountain Dairy Farm over the years to see what goes on there. The dairy farm has gained trust of an abundance of the communities due to the so sincere care that Bill, Brian, their family, and their team show regarding ecology, their products, their livestock, their duties, and more.
