1. It is a type of romance-comedy short film wherein a man saw a woman in the train station. It was love at first sight, so even in his workplace, he is unfocused on his work. Suddenly, he saw the woman he met at the train station. He came up with an idea to do a paper plane so that the woman will notice her. He tried to create hundreds of paper airplanes for the woman. Unfortunately, he failed, but he ran to follow the girl. Again, he failed to see the woman. Unanticipatedly, all of the paper planes create the way to meet the man and woman. At the end of the story, they met at the train station, where they first meet each other.
2. Yes, because I like rom-com genres. Even though the main and supporting characters are more on actions, the flow of the story is captivating. It really catches the interests of viewers.
3. I like the last part, wherein the paper planes make the way to meet them, man and woman, again. Then, I like all the plot, runs of the story because it was a gem, a genuine masterpiece. I don't have an unlike part in the story, because antagonists and particular conflicts are inevitably part of the plot of the story.
4. No matter how long the distance from your partner, if you are destined to be together, then your destiny will come all the way. It is zero because to keep the constant speed be equal.
