Module 3

This unit taught me that the writing process is not easy. No matter how much you research, reread, rewrite, evaluate, plan etc. there's always room for improvement. Nothing when writing will be perfect but we try as hard as we can to achieve the idea of perfection in writing. My review didn't really go how I wanted it to. I was looking for my peers to tear my paper down, give constructive feedback, and honesty. Instead I got compliments from someone who was probably just trying to make sure they got full credit for their assignment and probably just skimmed my paper. Thus being why I made no changes, if they say it's good then it's good. I want constructive feedback from someone who's not just looking for a grade, someone who's not afraid to hurt my feelings, someone qualified. Not saying that my peers aren't, but the point of that was to help each other become stronger and not just say "Hey do did great" or "this looks good" the point was to give feedback on how "good" can get to "great". I feel like I didn't get that from my peers. Honestly my Essay didn't evolve after I wrote and posted my paper for peer review, I didn't tweak it more. I had no constructive criticism to lean on to help build a better paper. I barely knew what I was doing when I started writing the paper. How could I write a better paper if I barely knew how to write a draft? I looked ahead at our next assignment and I see myself going downhill from here.
