Module 2 Reflection

As time progresses and we get further into this class I'm starting to realize that I need to buckle down on my time management skills. That's one of the greatest problems I'm having so far with this class. Another problem I think that I have is being used to being in a classroom with peers or teachers around everyday or consistently helping out and giving feedback. With this class being online there's very little social interaction because everyone has different schedules and that's a new thing for me. One of my new goals is to overcome this obstacle and learn to do work without someone there holding my hand every step of the way. I also need to stop second guessing myself and believe in my writing abilities.

I haven't yet finished the book readings but I will get those done by the end of this week. I did however finish my novel and while it was a good read I didn't too much enjoy the ending.
