

How to make your house burglar-proof?

Introduction

A safe home is a happy home. You might have heard of homes broken into for burglaries. When a burglar enters your home, they not only take your belongings but your sense of security as well. There is a wealth of security systems, add-ons, and tricks that can make your home safer and smarter. It's easy to feel overwhelmed when you are choosing home security measures. Here, your concerns about security devices, tips, and tricks will get answered.

Things you can do to make your house burglar-proof

Improve front door security

Use a solid-core front door with a thick and strong center that is more resistant to force and is fire-rated. Install a wide-angle peephole that gives a better view of your entryway. Update your old door locks.

Rekey your door lock with the help of a local locksmith, who will change its mechanism and make new keys. Give spare keys to only a few people. And if you lose your keys, change your lock immediately. Use a strike plate with large screws and a deadbolt in the front door. Replace small screws and old strike plate.

Keep the front door hinges inside of your home, and if they aren't inside then a local door frame repair person can fix it. Also, check if the door's frame and hinges are strong enough to endure an attack.

Keep your outdoor bright lighted. So that it is visible to people passing by, and prevents burglars from breaking in. Don't leave notes or messages for service people or family members on the front door.

If you're comfortable with dogs then they are good deterrents to burglars. If possible and affordable then boost entrance security with a video doorbell. Doorbell cameras are very effective for surveillance of your front door.

Use smart locks

A smart lock is a Wi-Fi or Bluetooth-enabled smart home device that lets you lock your house without keys. You can lock and unlock doors with a tap of a finger or a simple voice command.

With a smart lock, you can provide a unique code to others. That you can change at any time rather than giving them a spare key. Smart door locks also work with your home security system. It provides notifications when someone enters and enables you to remotely lock them.

It has an invisible design and installs inside of your door. Also, it works with your existing deadbolt and keys and gives a keyless entry. Further, you can use your i-phone or Android phone as your key to lock or unlock the door.

It also has an Auto-lock system. So you can set your home to lock by itself minutes after you close the door.

Use door and window alarms

Door and window alarms are a very subtle home security product. Usually, door alarms are small, wireless boxes. That you can attach close to the doors in your home using magnetic strips. You might want to position only one main door alarm close to the front door of your home.

Install an alarm system and make a habit of setting your alarm. For the most effective alarm system, conceal all its wirings. If you have a faulty alarm in your home, then replace it immediately. Look for a system that has a separate control panel and keypad.

While an alarm system can't stop a burglar from entering, it will turn the burglary into a smash and grab. The burglar then would be looking for the most easily stolen valuables, followed by a quick exit.

Secure all entrances

Make sure that the hinges of each entry door are on the inside of your house. If the hinges are on the outside, then fix them immediately. Install at least 1-inch throw deadbolt locks on all exterior doors. Reinforce window glass with security film. Install window or glass break sensors.

Add window security bars to prevent entry from there. But also use quick-release devices in case you need to release the bars from inside. Place lights around your front and backyard. Also place along pathways, near the garage, and other outdoor structures.

If you have much amount of glass on your doors, put 'security film' over the glass panes. It's a transparent, and tear-resistant film. It holds pieces of glass together when a pane shatters. So making breaking through more difficult.

Make sure that every door fits the frame close enough, there isn't a gap between them. Add a lock that vertically bolts the floor and the top frame of sliding doors. Even easier, if you put a wooden dowel in the bottom track, that can prevent the door from opening.

Use shutters and curtains to prevent burglars from snooping into your home. Plant thorny bushes near windows that make it difficult for burglars to enter. And provide evidence for tracking in case they succeed in the break-in.

Use security cameras

A doorbell video camera replaces your traditional doorbell. It allows you to see who is visiting your home and records instances of people approaching the door. Place security cameras around your home. It will allow you to watch important areas of your home from anywhere.

To watch use a security camera that comes with a mobile app. It lets you view real-time footage on your phone at any time. It is one home security solution to prevent burglars and provide evidence in case of theft. It can work with your home security system or even standalone.

The excellent all-in-one security camera comes with 180 degrees wide-angle cover. Also gives motion, and environmental alerts, night vision, and free cloud-based clip storage. It can connect with your smart home security system.

Use safes

Consider buying a safe to store valuable items. Such as jewelry, gold coins, important documents, and more. It's an affordable way to secure your valuables. You can choose a portable but heavy safe or one that bolts to the wall or floor.

Keep the safe positioned in a hidden, harder-to-reach spot. Keep your firearms in a heavy, fireproof gun safe that is too heavy to walk out with. If you can't get one but have a small cabinet, make sure to fasten it to a wall stud.

A chiseled-out space in the top of a door makes a great safe to hide small valuables. Make a hiding place in the acoustical ceiling of your room. Remove a tile and then restore it with magnetic fasteners or a similar device.

Use a safe with two locks on it. You can consider a safe with a fingerprint-reading system. If the safe has a passcode, you can give it to a trusted friend or a family member in case of an emergency.

Use motion sensors

Your security system should include sensors at entry points. Motion detectors within your house stay connected with a loud outdoor alarm. It will alert your neighborhood when someone enters your home while you are away.

Make it harder for burglars to break into your home undetected. Especially at night, use strategic lighting. A motion-activated floodlight can help to prevent burglars. You can place it near shadowed areas to create extra security well. It will light up only when it detects someone's activity there. The light will catch an intruder off-guard and will scare them off.

Secure the garage

Frost or cover your garage windows. Keep your garage door closed and locked even if your car isn't in your garage. Avoid leaving expensive tools or bikes out in open.

Install a peephole in the door that separates the house from the garage. Keep the door between your home and garage closed and reinforced. If you are going to park your car on the driveway, keep the garage opener with you, not in the car. Or you can unplug the garage opener while you are on vacation.

If possible, use a smart retrofit smart garage opener is an option. This device allows you to check the status of your garage while you're away. Also, control it remotely and also shut it at certain times.

How to burglar-proof without spending a dime

Don't be predictable, when you leave and arrive at home and schedule of home members. Keep lights on when you are away. But don't leave the same lights on throughout the day and for so long such as vacation or getaway.

When you aren't home, leave your blinds, curtains, drapes, or window coverings closed. Use sheer and semi-transparent curtains. Block possible entry points with thorny bush, woods, or fence. It prevents unnoticeable entries.

Create some ambient noise like leaving a radio on or TV playing softly while you are away. So anyone hears only murmurs of a voice. Use timers to on/off them by themselves. Change delivery packages, parcels, or couriers to drop at your friend's home or your office.
