

TV: Can you be without it?

TV or television is an electronic device that shows different programs broadcasted by different TV channels. The programs broadcasted by channels are in different genres like news, information, guide, series, movies, etc., which are available on TV 24 hours. Viewers do watch them according to their interests like for information or entertainment.

TV is useful to stay aware of one's surroundings vocally and visually. The content showed on TV is still growing as it is becoming part of human life. Also, TV has become part of the home like other home appliances, but other devices like phones and PC with the internet can also serve media to everyone. So one or the other way media is accessible to humans to live an enriched life. It means that not TV but media is becoming part of our lives, which need to get accepted. So being without it is not a choice one would make.

Now TV being a part of human life provides content about food, living, travel, and much more. So if it is about being without it, it will be like being unaware of around globally. Now TV is a one-way communication device so it is not that user-accessible compared to other devices with the internet. So at present, the question can be that to be without Phone or PC which do have internet access, because everything is available there through internet. But now TVs do also come with internet access to provide more media and information to users.

But still with its limitations TV is easy to use and can give adequate information and media via the air about everything around.
