Fabric seats are easy to take off and put back again. If you know the stain and it is relatively fresh, then go to a dry cleaner. Dry cleaners tend to work best with chemicals and steam. They clean the stain without ruining or shrinking the fabric too much.

2. All purpose cleaner

Another easy way to clean is with a strong all-purpose cleaner like the Simple Green solution. This solution works for almost all kinds of stains. They use enzymes, which help loosen the stain or better yet just digest it. It is also perfect to use as a degreaser. If you have stains with grease, this type of cleaner works great. There are so many in the market you can pick out any. However, make sure it is especially for cloth seats if it does not work for all the surfaces. A good Upholstery cleaner will work here too.

3. Enzymes

Enzymes work great if you know the kind of stain that is on the fabric car seats. These work as a natural stain remover and are pretty much the sure thing. They have the same function as in your body. The particles use the lock and key method to break down. Different elements have different enzymes that break it down in the simpler form. In the human body, they help with digestion. However, in the cleaning business. They work great as loosening the stains. The following are the kind of enzymes for the type of stain.

- Lipase works best for oil spills and fatty stains. These stains include lipstick, creams, lotions, sweat, and even condiments.
- Amylase works best for starchy stains. These include baby food, syrup, and even sugary stains.
- Pectinase is a great enzyme for your fruit stains. However, it may not work fruit flavors in different things.
- Protease works as a stain remover for proteins. These stains include grass stains, urine spills, bloodstains, and even meat stains.
- Mannanase is an enzyme that works for food stains. This enzyme can work for spills and stains of tea. It also works on coffee stains.
- Cellulase works as a general stain remover like for dirt and mud.

Cleaning leather seats of cars is different than cleaning fabric seats. The reason is that fabric generally withstands a lot more pressure than leather. Leather stains are also more solid and stubborn. However, there are plenty of professional ways you can clean them.

1. Leather cleaners

One of the best ways is to get leather cleaners for your car seats. Leather cleaners are chemicals that work great without ruining the leather. They are great and a very effective stain remover. The chemicals do not make the part weak or give a melted shape to the seats. Modern leather seats generally have a safe coating over them. These allow the leather to survive for a long time and not withhold stains.

2. Dry cleaner

You can always give the leather coverings to the dry cleaners. However, you will need to look around for special cleaners that deal with leather. This is a slightly expensive option, as leather needs a lot of attention. However, they usually get the job done.

Baking soda is almost a magical substance in household products. If you do not use it in your food, you should keep it in your house nevertheless. It helps in many different things. One of this is cleaning your fabric seats.

To use baking soda solution, first vacuum the stain. This process helps remove the residue entirely. It also helps the spread of the stain during the cleaning process. Sprinkle a cup of baking soda all over the stain and let the solution rest. Baking soda has the power to absorb stains. It also works as a natural enzyme. It helps digest grease stains, and even motor oil stains. After about 30 minutes brush to scrub the stain with warm water and remove the baking soda. It is truly one of the best household products.

You can also use club soda with baking soda. Club soda gives the baking soda a reaction that activates both the products. However, if it is sweet club soda, it can have an adverse reaction.

2. Vinegar and laundry detergent

Vinegar is another magical substance in the pantry. If you do not use it in the food, then just keep it in your pantry because it comes in handy on rainy days. It works as a great cleaning product for many things.

For a good vinegar solution, the best thing to do is to use white vinegar and use some laundry detergent. About one cup vinegar works. Make a paste out of them and brush to scrub with a microfiber cloth. You can also apply the paste and leave it for about 30 minutes. The acidic nature of vinegar and the natural enzymes in detergent help break down stains. Scrub is for a while and then vacuum over it. You will see a difference. You can also add some warm water to the solution. You can also make a solution in the spray bottle and spray it. Let the solution air dry.

3. Dish soap

Dish soaps and liquids all advertise their product by endorsing the power of degreasers in them. Some say they use lemons, some use other nontoxic chemicals. Nevertheless, they all work well. Hence, for a harsh stain use this too.

Scrub the stained area with your dish soap for a while. This method is particularly helpful for greasy stains. However, it may not work well with heavy grease like motor oils and tire grease. Add warm water if you have to make a bubbly solution. Alternatively, you can make the cleaning solution in a spray bottle and spray it. Let the solution air dry for best results.

Cleaning leather seats

Cleaning leather seats at home requires a little bit of concentration. Leather is strong but with the wrong chemicals, you can actually make it worse. Here are the safest ways to clean your leather seats at home. Just remember if you have to use water for wiping, use cold water. Hot water has the tendency to set the stain faster. In addition, always use a clean cloth.

1. toothpaste

One of the safest and best tips for your leather seats is toothpaste. However, make sure you do not use gel toothpaste. Use a soft microfiber towel and put a little toothpaste on the stain. Do not jump in with a huge amount. Rather begin small and slowly build it up. Wipe away with a clean cloth or better, microfiber towel in the end. Make sure to use leather conditioner in the end.

In fact, toothpaste is also great for car windows and mirrors.

2. Nail polish remover

Nail polish remover have either spirit or acetone. Both of them are harsher chemicals than usual. So use this method for tougher stain only. Apply a little on a microfiber cloth and slowly wipe away the stain. Make sure you do not scrub too hard or you can ruin the leather. Instead of using huge amounts, just start with little and build it up. Use a spray bottle for the right amount. Gently rub the solution over.

The best way to ensure that the material remains safe is to patch test it on a very small area of the seat. If it works then go for it. If you remotely feel that it is too harsh, then do not continue with the process. Keep your leather safe with leather conditioner in the end. Stop using immediately if it gives a bleaching effect. Always use a clean towel and clean water to go with this.

3. Dish detergent

There are several types of dishwashing solutions. One of them is dishwashing detergent. These work best for cleaning leather seats. They have anti greasing or degreasing options. However, they are lighter on leather that makes them one of the best tips.

The best way to use it is to make a warm water and detergent solution. Use a microfiber cloth to clean the stain and you are good to go. You can also use a brush attachment and wipe away the stain. Remember to gently scrub.

Conclusion
