Following a brief hiatus at the heels of his 2019 EP Lovers?, Travis Drews AKA Casual T returns with his newest single 'Transcendence', embodying the beauty of future bass. This single is refreshing and euphoric and sends you to your own world.

A Genesis Of A Successful Year

2020 was a rather quiet year for the ambitious producer after completing his Lovers? EP. Nonetheless, he is back at the forefront of emerging talent as he storms in the new year with a mixture of new music under his belt, including Transcendence'.

"Transcendence represents a bridge between the Lovers? Ep and the future of Casual T. I'm moving away from writing love songs and closer toward capturing the visceral, powerful emotions that make electronic music so exciting. Transcendence is about letting go of the toxic people and habits that stop you from being your best self. It is about growing greater than you had thought possible and coming into your own. It's about transcending and becoming who you are meant to be" - Casual T

Casual T knows how to command a stage. Hailing from Austin, the "Live Music Capital of the World", he is an electric labyrinth of sound and show. A charismatic figure both onstage and in the studio, he distills characteristics of bass, pop, and hip-hop to forge his fluid signature sound. Equal parts old-school and futuristic, he generates a unique synergy. Travis has also performed at events by the likes of Euphoria Music Festival, Waterloo Music Festival, ESPN's X Games, along with various showcases across the Texas Hill Country.

Something you also might not have known about Casual T: The rising producer's passion for dance music was surprisingly prompted by a near-death experience at a music festival. In 2012, both of his lungs collapsed due to the air pressure from the subs the event. Despite this injury, Travis still decided to dedicate his life to making music in the same year. Turning tragedy into art, giving birth to his magnum opus - Casual T.
