

Reacting to the death of George Floyd—a Black man whose killing by police sparked global protests against police brutality—thousands of Calgarians gathered to support local Black Lives Matter demonstrations this past June.

Building a Racially Just and Equitable Community

With current tensions and societal upheaval placing intense focus on movements such as Black Lives Matter, it's no longer enough for individuals and organizations to simply acknowledge and embrace diversity. To actively combat racism, we must go beyond changing feelings and attitudes and examine what steps to take to achieve a racially just and equitable community. Here are two groups calling the community to action on anti-racism.

By Karen Rudolph Durrie