Unicorn Island

Unicorn island is an island far off the coast of Hawaii, with no one knowing about it besides everyone who lives on the island. There are fluffy unicorns that any kid would dream of having as a friend, with magical creatures most people have never seen or even thought existed.

Amy and Bella were two unicorns; Amy was very outgoing and had more energy than anyone else. She always had a smile on her face, and most people who know her closely say she is very talkative. Then there is Bella, who is not as talkative. She is shy and mostly just follows Amy around. They both live in a town where all houses are made of marshmallows. Everyone's appetite consists of sugar. All they have on the island is nothing else, only candy. It's all peace and happiness.

All of the unicorns have a suspicion that something terrible will happen. They see a ship coming from the horizon. Amy and Bella know something terrible will happen without knowing what this island has or even what it is. They go around the town, alerting people that something horrific is upon the island. People make shifting bazookas filled with candy, ready to fight if someone is coming to take over the island and get rid of them. The ship is coming closer and closer to shore. The unicorn's island fears what will happen in the next few hours. The ship filled with humans arrives; a tall man with a loud voice says he wants to meet the person in charge. Little does he know there is no one in charge on the island. So Amy steps up and goes to meet this man. He explains his name is Mathew, and he wants to take over the island for his business and says he will give them 20 percent of all earnings, but they don't want to give up the place they live and have grown up in. Amy tells them we aren't giving up our island for people they have never seen before. Mathew does not like that answer, so he decides to take it into his own hands. He wants the island for what he thinks his million-dollar investment will be this village.

He walks past the crowd and sets on fire one of the marshmallow houses, which makes the people of the town angry, so Bella grabs a candy bazooka and starts to shoot candy at him and his ship. The whole village gets along with it and starts to fight back. They are shooting candy everywhere. All you can see is just candy. The humans realize that the town has more powerful weapons than they expected. So Mathew tells everyone to report back to the ship to develop a new plan. Since the original method that they had is not going to work. Mathew decides he will go after the leader of the village, Bella. So he steps off the ship, and the rest of his team tries to destroy everything on site. Mathew runs to find Bella, but she realizes that he will try to find her, so she goes to the tower in the center of the village with an enormous bazooka in the whole town.

The unicorns start to notice that all humans are attacking them and stop attacking their houses; the fear begins to rise with the unicorns' life on the line. They all refill and upgrade the empowerment of their candy bazookas. Everyone in the village is fighting to keep their homes and places to live. The humans are rapidly getting injured and being taken out by the unicorns. Mathew realizes that he will not be able to take over the town. The unicorns are too powerful and have many more weapons than the Mathews teams, so he decides to pull out because he can't deal with his team getting killed anymore by unicorns.

Amy says that that is a win for the unicorns; now they have to rebuild their town, and now they know they have enough power if someone tries to attack them to survive and win. With most people's houses being destroyed and candy was everywhere, Bella says she will be around town all day and night to help people rebuild their houses. Bella wants to help everyone have their lives return to normal after the disaster in their village.
