

INTRIGUING DIFFERENCE BETWEEN VALUE AND IMPACT

Although these expressions share words and similarities, value and impact by far sit apart.

VALUE: Value is the regard, worth, importance or usefulness that something is believed to deserve.

It can also be considered as one's principle or standard which of course affects his or her judgment.

IMPACT: While dictionaries may convey various definitions of impact, and considering the aimed context of this writing, a corresponding meaning of impact is simply; A considerable effect or influence derived from someone or something.

If these words can be defined separately without much dithering, how are they related? Why do many confuse value for impact? Why does it seem difficult to voice out at the very first demand?

I believe the following answers will definitely be putting you at peace.

Whatever is of value will definitely have an impact.

Whoever or whatever you value may have a large impact on your choices, judgments and decisions.

Bearing in mind that values can be both positive and negative, some values may not have a good Impact. Whereas because something has an impact does not automatically makes it valuable.

Intriguing isn't it?

Value is the regard you have for something, while Impact is the effect your value has on you. Knowing this, be sure to value something worthwhile.
