Jewellery brand Kismet by Milka has launched the Fearless Collection, a new line inspired by themes of courage and defiance.

Described by the brand as “daring” and “refined”, the collection draws on symbols of “raw determination”, with designs said to “reflect boldness and instinct”.

The pieces are influenced by the legacy of physicist Marie Curie, the only person to win Nobel Prizes in two different scientific fields.

Her work in radioactivity and commitment to science are cited as key inspirations for the collection's themes of bravery and dedication.

Animal motifs including the honey badger and eagle are central to the design language. The honey badger is often described as the "world's most fearless animal", while the eagle represents "power and freedom".

The Fearless Collection is now available online and in selected retail outlets.

Milka Karaağaçlı İnce, founder and creative director of Kismet by Milka, said: "Like everyone else, I've faced many challenges in my personal life and career. It wasn't just my belief in getting back up that kept me going when I fell, it was the sources of inspiration that taught me not to fear the fall in the first place.

"There are so many of [those fearless women] around us, if we know how to truly look. And who knows how many fearless gems lie within us, too."
