

Use of Force Reporting

Track, monitor, and raise the visibility of use of force events

Efficient collection and reporting of use of force data has never been more critical for law enforcement. Use of force event data offers many benefits to modern agencies — from helping to strengthen partnerships with the communities they serve, to enhancing agency effectiveness — but it can be a challenge to transform use of force event data into actionable insights.

With Mark43's Use of Force Reporting, agencies can easily track, monitor, and raise the visibility of use of force events. Agencies can efficiently write use of force reports and complete multiple levels of approval. Data can be exported in an FBI-compliant digital format to aid in reporting requirements. With consolidated use of force event data, agencies can draw actionable insights from data to identify future training opportunities, assess whether the deployment of force is working as intended, and more.

Mark43's Use of Force Reporting is available as a standalone solution to support your critical responsibilities or as an integrated part of the Mark43 Public Safety Platform for streamlined officer workflows.

Key Benefits

Efficiently write reports

Easily write use of force reports and complete multiple levels of approval. Current users of Mark43 RMS can further streamline reporting workflows — integrated reporting means information only needs to be entered once.

Analyze use of force data

All fielded data is immediately available for analysis in Mark43 RMS, providing a consolidated view of use of force event data across the agency.

Identify actionable insights

Agencies can more easily synthesize use of force event data to inform policy development, training programs, performance metrics, and accountability.

Meet your community in the moment

Among calls for increased accountability and transparency, consolidated and accurate use of force event data helps agencies to strengthen their relationships with the communities they serve.
