Skechers GoRun Razor 3 Hyper $135
BEST FOR: Setting PRs. When going fast is your priority, step into this fun speedster. At 6.4 ounces and with a 27-millimeter stacked heel, the Razor 3 Hyper boasts the best weight-to-cushion ratio of all the shoes we tested. The tight upper boosts control, while the EVA midsole delivers one of the most launch-you-forward rides of any shoe on the market. 6.4 oz; 4 mm drop

Saucony Triumph ISO 5 $160
BEST FOR: Unmatched comfort. Roomy and smooth riding, the Triumph ISO 5 is the Cadillac of daily trainers, a stable cruiser best suited to slow and moderate days. With 28 millimeters of resilient TPU, this shoe is a cushion lover's dream. Saucony's new footbed contours around your foot like a bucket seat, providing a truly dialed-in fit. 11.4 oz (men's, pictured) / 10 oz (women's); 8 mm drop

Under Armour Hovr Infinite $120
BEST FOR: The data conscious. There's no shoe more feature rich than the new Hovr Infinite. Its midsole has a soft core wrapped in mesh for a plush yet snappy feel. And a chip in the midsole syncs via Bluetooth with the MapMyRun app to record pace, stride, and cadence. 10.8 oz (men's, pictured) / 8.8 oz (women's); 8 mm drop
