

(Los Angeles, CA) There's no question that on top of having a chic outfit picked for a night out, it's also important to have a matching manicure and a pair of baffle-worthy brows.

Last night, Nail Bar and Beauty Lounge called all beauty bloggers and beauty celebrators alike to gather in their best threads to celebrate the salon's second anniversary at a party thrown by Fabfiffun. While patiently waiting to get one's brows shaped at the newly launched Chelle Pop-up Brow Bar, attendees were able to grab a quick drink from one of the Midori bars, where featured drinks were made with Skinnygirl vodka or tequila (if it was THAT kinda night). Inside the Brow Bar, artists worked to make sure that the guests had brows so sharp they could cut through the room. Everywhere you looked, those who had visited the brow bar showed off brows so divinely forged that they would put the art in the MOMA to shame.

Attendees were snapping pics all night of their still-damp manicures alongside the Magnolia Cupcake chandeliers that adorned every table. As the night went on, guests were spotted shmoozing, snapchatting, singing, and spamming Instagram.

As the night came to a close, guests left (goodie bags in hand) with a flawless manicure, impeccable brows, and another good night under their designer belts.
