Horoscope Mystery: were di

This morning, at 5:28am, an unregistered plane dropped an estimated 2000 leaflets all over the city. City Hall has confirmed that this was not a planned event and have asked the culprit to step forward.

The leaflets feature a horoscope that suggest High Street bank could be in danger of a robbery, it is currently unclear if this is true however police have confirmed that they will not be increasing patrols or security in or around the bank. Claiming that it would only satisfy the jokester if they acted.

The whole city is trying to solve the mystery with #HoroscopeMystery trending across the web. Join us on our twitter as we share the best guessed at solving the mystery

I reread the words in front of me 'Nothing can stop you'. When I wrote them, I had hoped they bring me comfort in this moment, instead they fill me with fear. Maybe my approach wasn't subtle enough, there's an entire Twitter hashtag trying to solve the mystery of 'who wrote the Horoscope Mystery'. It's stupid really, none of the 'clues' as they're calling them are vague if you're supposed to know what they mean. Clearly everyone needs to reread my words for Sagittarius. I had considered being less direct but thought it might cause issues with the people who I needed to see it but it's okay. No one is going to know what's happened. They're too busy trying to solve a mystery.

Horoscope Mystery: £500,000 taken from Bank

Police have confirmed that West Street bank was robbed of £500,000 at 2:37 yesterday by what appears to be a highly organised group.

Banks in the area had been on high alert since mysterious leaflets appeared around town yesterday morning. The suspicious pages appeared to detail plans of a robbery in the form of a horoscope, yet police refused to up patrols and security claiming that panic wasn't necessary.

The group entered the Bank at 2:28, the team were unidentifiable wearing all black with masks covering their faces. By 2:37 they had exited the bank with £500,000 in cash from the tills and vault. One member of staff at the bank has commented that "They were very calm and seemed to know each other well. They apologised for what was happening which was nice."

The security guard added that he was "thrown off by their entire demeanor. There was no aggression and as they left one of the men turned to me and said, 'Sorry man, the economy just isn't what it used to be'. So, I guess I sorta understand if I'm being honest"

#HoroscopeMystery has been flooded with support for the robbers, with many users calling for police to forget about it. Since they were fairly warned about the event taking place and choose to not act appropriately to the warning. Further support has come out following the discovering of £100,000 outside the Children's Shelter this morning with the public demanding that the police return the money that was donated by our very own robin hoods.

An official statement was released apologising for the lack of action from police and a hunt for suspects has begun, however police have confirmed that they currently have no leads

International Moose Count Underway

By BOB O'BOBSTON

The UN-sponsored International Moose Census got off to a flying start today with hopes for an increase in the worldwide moose population compared to last year's disappointing figures. Among the traditional early reporters were Egypt, returning figures of six moose, a twenty percent increase on 2011's figures of five, and Uruguay whose moose population remains stable at eleven.

According to Robbie McRobson, head of the UN Moose Preservation Council, worldwide moose numbers are expected to grow markedly on last year due to the traditional moose strongholds of Canada and the United States, with the larger developing moose ecologies also poised to make gains. The largest percentage increase in moose will likely come from China", says McRobson. The Chinese government has invested heavily in moose infrastructure over the past decade, and their commitment to macrofauna is beginning to pay dividends". Since 2004 China has expanded moose pasture from 1.5% of arable land to nearly 3.648% and moose numbers are expected to rise to 60,000 making China a net moose exporter for the first time. This is good news for neighbouring Mongolia, a barren moose-wasteland whose inhabitants nonetheless have an insatiable desire for the creatures. The increase in Beijing Ulanhotan trade is Reading along with what has been written about us is funny. People seem weirdly okay with what we did, like it doesn't matter that we took the money because they understand and at least it was entertaining. We never really thought we'd do it; it was a fact plan made just to satisfy our desire to have a way out.

But the more we thought about it, the more real it became. Why shouldn't we take the money? We need it and so does the children's shelter. It seemed fair. When I released the flyers yesterday, I still wasn't sure we would do it but then everyone kept tweeting about it. Suddenly, we didn't want to let everyone down by not doing something, so we went for it. It was for the best, the police still don't know what they're doing, and we can afford to pay rent now for quite a while.

The tweets keep coming in which is the weirdest part. People calling us heroes, claiming that the police should just let it go. As nice as that sounds it would be naive to think that we won't be chased. We took a lot of money, but for now we sit in the safety of my house. Curtains closed as we try to figure out what it means to have this much money and how exactly we can use it without getting caught.
