

My word of the year.

Writing New Year's resolutions is a very common task among people around the world. I did mine and "start" is definitely the word that appeared the most and the one that I believe that is going to be the word of the next year for me. These are a few things that I'm planning to start doing next year. First, I'm going to start driving. I really want to finally get a drivers license because it's going to be easier to go to the university or to just go out with my friends. Next, I want to start learning Japanese. I listen to music all the time while I'm doing a bunch of stuff, and on my playlist I have a lot of Japanese songs that I really want to be able to sing it correctly one day. Lastly, I want to start exercising, I actually planned to start doing that, but I'm a very lazy person. I hope to be a healthier person next year. I expect that next year is going to be totally different from this one as well, and I hope to achieve anything that I want to. And what about you? Did you already have a word of the year?

The paragraph needs a transition between the hook and the topic sentence. Also, remember to check for any misspellings before handing your text in. Other than that, great work! :)
