If you are puzzled as to how to design a feature wall for your home or office, you're not alone. With some imagination and willingness to try different techniques, you too can have any room make a memorable impression on family and visitors alike. Whether it is the boardroom, the living room, or your home office, a feature wall doesn't have to be complicated. Any room can be as individual as people are, just read ahead for some clever ideas.

Wall Murals are the Easiest Solution

Not sure what to base your room's décor around? Try one of our removable wall murals (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/wall-murals.html>) to create a jumping off point. For instance, try this Golden Sunflowers Wall (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/golden-sunflowers-wall-mural.html>) mural in your sunroom. The beauty of this mural could be a picture. Place a few taller plants at positions and add some sheer white curtains accenting the mural. Add some softness and a gentle woman's touch to the point in this special room.

Shine a Light

Who doesn't love the rich textures of stone or brick? It brings out the earth lover in each of us as we gaze at the intricate coarseness of the surface. Doesn't it just make you want to reach out and touch it? Now take this tactile sensation to your den as you have a brick wall mural (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/brick-wall-wall-mural.html>) donning that large blank space. The expanse is just begging for some accent lighting on the walls (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/wall-murals.html>) showcasing the hills and valleys of your mural.

Bold is Beautiful

While most homes are usually painted a nice, neutral white or cream color to give potential homebuyers a blank slate to imagine their own style, your home doesn't have to be that drab. These bright, neutral colors can still enliven your room, but try taking a single wall and splash some bold colors on it. Look at the rest of the décor in the room for coordinating color palettes. Then amp that color up and apply some vivid paint strokes to give your room (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/wall-murals.html>) some panache.

Stripes are so Last Year

The boardroom doesn't have to be a drab grey or white to be an effective and interesting meeting place. Rather than add color by painting stripes on the walls, take a cue from your old pal the triangle. To give your conference room some modern flair, take one corner and paint part of the wall a complimentary color, essentially painting from the top corner to form a large triangle. This breaks up the monotony of a single color and provides the eyes some upward movement focusing the meeting on you instead of the boardroom table.

A Little Dab Will do Ya

Thinking back on bold colors. To coordinate the rest of the room's décor, try stippling some matching colors from your curtains, tapestries, or other colorful accents. Take two to three colors and randomly paint either over the entire wall (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/wall-murals.html>) or up to two-thirds of the wall, leaving the top third a bright neutral color giving the illusion of more space and light. Add some coordinating pillows or pillow shams, depending on the room used to complete the look.

Frame That Mural

Whether decorating your home dining room or that special restaurant, try a layered approach to your wall using a wall mural (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/wall-murals/rooms/residential.html>) backdrop. Once you've applied a special mural, try framing it with an indoor arch. This focuses the eye on your wall mural investment and adds emphasis to the wall.

Speaking of Frames

Grey is the new black, at least for wall colors. Grey gives a soothing palette for most decorative styles, especially the modern look. Take some sleek, highly polished black frames of different sizes and place either family photos or some of your favorite artwork in them. Now make a modern collage on that feature wall. The shiny black frames can tie in with your modern black leather furniture giving the room a polished and sophisticated statement to any room.

Tips and Tricks

- Feature walls are meant to be special. This means use them sparingly. If you have one or two rooms that you love most, or perhaps you do a lot of entertaining and want to make your kitchen, dining or living room a conversation piece, take a cue from your own lifestyle as to which rooms would benefit most from making such a statement.
- Use your feature wall (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/wall-murals.html>) as a way to coordinate the rest of the décor. If you have numerous antiques, you may want to rethink using a modern skyline as your wall mural. Perhaps try using a lovely patterned design that compliments the color scheme as the style.
- Go with the flow, the Feng shui flow that is. When you enter the room you want to decorate, notice where your eyes go first and why. If it's not because of some structural flaw or a previous decorating disaster, consider this an excellent blank canvas to highlight in your home.
- Think of your feature wall as a canvas. If you were painting, you wouldn't have holes in your canvas, so why would you have windows on your feature wall? Avoid using walls with doors or windows so that the true focus is your clever artistry, not looking out of the room.

There are so many ways to design a feature wall. Whether you use paint, lighting, wall murals (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/wall-murals.html>), or other decorative pieces, let whatever you choose bring it to life and coordinate the stage for your special room.
