Even though we spend most of our time in the bedroom sleeping, this oft unconsidered room can have the potential to become a private oasis. With a few creative tweaks, you can design your bedroom wall (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/wall-murals/rooms/residential/bedroom.html>) to be beautiful and functional.

Color

NO THANKS.

Perhaps the most essential item to consider is the color. What kind of mood do you want to achieve for your bedroom? Do you want relaxing? Maybe you're not a morning person and need some energizing colors to get you motivated in the morning. Also, consider the size of the bedroom. Darker colors make rooms feel smaller, while lighter colors make them feel bigger. Below are some suggested colors and the type of energy they bring:

- Yellows: Optimistic, stimulation, good humor. Great for mood lifting and energy.
- Oranges: Energetic, happiness, stimulating. Also good for energizing and mood lifting.
- Reds: Energetic, confidence, romantic. Great for couples who want to spice up the room.
- Whites\Creams: Clean, airy, fresh.

Wall Murals

If you're still not sure on how to design your bedroom wall (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/customized-image-upload-wall-mural.html>), take a look around the room. Each item will give you some potential style to change or adjust. Some things to look at are window treatments, storage, lighting, furniture, and other decorations.

If you decide painting is just too much like hard work, why not try one of our wall murals? A wall mural can easily and quickly set the tone and theme to your bedroom wall. Whether you want a tranquil forest (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/wall-murals/collections/forest-and-trees.html>) or an artistic escape (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/wall-murals/collections/art.html>), we have wall murals to suit any taste or style. One of the best things about our murals is that they are removable. No messy solutions or wallpaper stripping chemicals. If you decide to move the mural to another room or just want to readjust its placement, it's as easy as can be.

Headboards

If you decide to do something differently, you will still need to determine where you want the focal point of the bedroom to be. This gives you and any visitors a place to focus their attention and aids in creating a theme. If you're unsure of what to use as a focal point, there are actually many ideas. Your most obvious one being the main bedroom wall. Here it could be a large and decorative headboard, wall sconces, a large painting or grouping of photos. The sky's the limit as to what you can use.

If you decide to use the headboard as a focal point, make sure it is large enough or eye-catching to draw the eyes immediately to it. Whether it's an ornately carved headboard, or subtly padded and material covered, this can be the jumping off point you need to decide colors, décor, or theme. If you don't have an elaborate headboard, you can still be creative and give the illusion of a headboard by strategically placing pillows at the head of the bed. By mixing or matching several pillows both in color and pattern, you can create a visually stunning statement.

Shelving

Who says storage has to be boring? Why not use different storage options to create a dynamic and useful bedroom wall? If you have an understated headboard, try building or placing shelving above the bed where your headboard would typically go. You can either go slick and stylish with painted doors to hide the clutter inside or have fashionable open shelving to display your cherished memories and treasures. Another way to design a bedroom wall with shelves is to take an even number of shelves creating a balanced set. Whether you have matching items on the shelves or an eclectic mix of knick-knacks it up to you. It will either create a sense of balance or a boho-styled wall depending on your choice of items on shelves and if you even match the shelves themselves. Have fun with this. Shelving can be functional but also very fun.

Windows

Windows provide more than just natural lighting. If you decide to design your bedroom wall with a window as the focus, there are plenty of window treatments that can customize the look to suit any tastes. Curtains come in a variety of materials and colors. You can either match the wall colors for a unified approach or use a completely different color or textile to add a dramatic punch to your bedroom wall. If you use a patterned material, try one that matches the overall theme of your bedroom. This textile can be used to choose colors for one or all walls, tie in some décor you have on the walls or shelving, or just merely be the dramatic statement for the entire room. With the curtains, you can decide whether to use toppers. Toppers are like curtain “caps” that add additional flair while covering up any ugly curtain rods. You can even find decorative curtain rods with endcaps to add a subtle (or not so subtle) punch to the window. The color of the metal for your curtain rods can be used to create a statement on your bedroom.

Whether you want room darkening (everyone loves a cave to sleep in at night) or some merely for decoration, blinds can make a bold statement all by themselves. With room darkening blinds, they usually come in a variety of colors and patterns. The key with them is that they have a special material on the back to block out the bright light of the sun. If you have problems sleeping, this might be a viable option to catch better Z's and make your bedroom wall beautiful. Other blinds come in bamboo, different varieties of wood, and even material. You can also choose vertical or horizontal blinds to change up the look of your bedroom wall.

Other Décor

If your inner Picasso is screaming to be let out, then explore the endless choices of decorations that can be hung on your bedroom wall. If you have a large painting, then you have the perfect item to design your bedroom wall (<https://www.limitlesswalls.com/wall-murals/rooms/residential/girl-bedroom.html>) around. Or if you have a couple, or several for that matter, pictures that are approximately the same size, you can artistically arrange them to create a bold, yet beautiful statement. Balance that out with a wall sconce or two to provide mood lighting for your walls and artwork. Perhaps you love photography but have no idea what to do with them all. Create a picture gallery by framing your favorite pics (or even clipped out images from magazines) and either arranging them in an orderly balanced fashion or creating a random pattern on the wall.

Another fun idea to decorate your bedroom wall is to hang three-dimensional objects on the walls. Who says all of the décor needs to be flat and two dimensional. Maybe you have a fascinating piece of driftwood from your last trip to the beach. Hang it on the wall. Not only does it make a bold statement, but adds a bit of nostalgia from your found item. If you like to sculpt (or maybe just love sculpture) arrange several pieces on your bedroom wall to add an exciting twist to your décor. It could be made from any material, but most of all, this is something you could create and add your own personal style to the room

Let your imagination be your only limits what you can achieve when you design your bedroom relaxing to a fun playroom, let your ideas soar and fill your room with a personal statement.
